Appeal to U. S.

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 31.—The government of Premier Daladier tonight asked the advice of the United States Government on "monetary aspects" of a sweeping recovery program proposed to straighten out France's national finances.

It was stated authoritatively that the cabinet, which met tonight with Daladier, had decided to delay all action on its recovery decrees pending Washington's reply.

Almost simultaneously Daladier was informed by Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet that Chancellor Hitler of Germany had offered France a "gentlemen's agreement" to refrain from war for either 10 or 25 years.

Offer Brought to Paris

Hitler's offer of peace was brought to Paris by Andre Francois-Poncet, new French Ambassador to Rome, who conferred with Der Fuehrer at Berchtesgaden before leaving Berlin, where he served as Ambassador for seven years.

Francois-Poncet's report resulted immediately in a series of important diplomatic consultations, revealing France's desire to obtain the "no war" pact with Germany without delay and provide a foundation for a general four-power scheme of European appeasement.

The request to the United States was made under the tripartite monetary accord embracing the United States, France and Great Britain.

The cabinet expected Washington's reply by 5 p. m. (noon, E. S. T.) Tuesday.

Proposal Awaited Here

In Washington, Treasury officials said the reported proposal of the French government to adopt a system of partial exchange control in place of the present free flow of money through the tripartite agreement machinery had not been received here up to a late hour last night.

In the absence of details as to what the Daladier government is suggesting, officials would not comment on the possibility that France may be cut adrift from the agreement, thereby limiting monetary co-operation chiefly to this country and Great Britain.

It will depend on what the French propose, officials said. The United States is anxious to avoid curtailment of the agreement. Reports from Paris indicated the Daladier government was hopeful that the suggested monetary measures would be regarded as compatible with the agreement, or, if incompatible, that the agreement could be modified.

Britain More Concerned

If the French government adopts a program involving regulation of foreign exchange, credit transfers and currency exports to prevent the loss of further capital funds, as reported, the effect will be to alter substantially the machinery of the tripartite accord, experts pointed out.

The keystone of monetary co-operation among the three countries has been the free exchange of gold

Buenos Aires Gets Big Loan in U. S.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 31 (AP).—The ministry of finance tonight announced negotiations in New York for a $75,000,000 loan to the municipality of Buenos Aires had been successful, and a contract would be signed in New York tomorrow.

The contract is to be signed by the Argentina Ambassador and a group of New York bankers, the ministry said. The loan is to be used principally for widening the city's avenues.

Nazis Retire Generals Who Feared Allies

Beck, Rundstedt Out 'Ouster' Is Rumored Opposed Invasions

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 31.—Gen. Ludwig Beck, chief of the army general staff, resigned today and retired to private life because he could not see eye-to-eye with Adolf Hitler.

A brief official announcement said the Fuehrer had accepted the resignation of Gen. Beck, along with that of Col. Gen. Gerd von Rundstedt, commander of army group No. 1.

VON BOCK

Although the announcement said both commanders were relieved at their "own desire," well-informed circles believed they were taking the consequences for not being in step with Nazi policies.

Gen. Beck, long reported at odds with Hitler, was said to have been in disagreement particularly on German military occupation of Austria and Czechoslovakia when such action was being considered. Gen. Rundstedt has never concealed his friendship for the house of Hohenzollern.

The 58-year-old retired chief of the general staff was succeeded by Lieut. Gen. of Artillery Franz Halder, who had been reported acting in Beck's place since September when the Czechoslovak crisis was at its height.

Col.-Gen. Fedor von Bock, 54, who like Gen. Rundstedt led German soldiers into Sudetenland, was appointed to succeed the resigned commander of army group No. 1.

Big Czech Area Reported Won By Hungary

11,000 Square Miles Million Live in Them Hills Left Ruthenia

By the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 31.—A reliable diplomatic source said tonight that Italy and Germany, comprising a court of arbitration, have agreed to recommend surrender of 11,000 square miles of Czechoslovakian territory and a population of more than 1,000,000 persons to Hungary.

The Berlin and Rome governments, asked by both Czechs and Hungarians to arbitrate the territorial dispute, were said to have reached an agreement already on the method of settling the controversy and details will be worked out Wednesday at Vienna.

Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop will confer at Vienna in a conference attended by Czech and Hungarian observers.

Most of Ruthenia Saved

A compromise solution was reported to have been reached by Italy and Germany on their conflicting viewpoints regarding the thorny question of Czechoslovakia's eastern Ruthenia Province.

Polish-Hungarian demands for amputation of Ruthenia to provide a common frontier between the two countries appeared to have met rejection but the southwestern corner of Ruthenia will go to Hungary, it was reported.

This corner includes the Ruthenian capital of Uzhorod and the towns of Mukacevo and Beehovo.

It was said in Rome the territory to be retained by Ruthenia, now an autonomous unit of the Czech state, is mountainous and otherwise sterile, making the province economically dependent to a great ex-

Martian Invasion by Radio 'Regrettable,' Says McNinch

By James D. Secrest.

All was quiet on the armchair front last night as the Nation's radio listeners gradually recovered from the imaginary catastrophe of an invasion by Martian monsters.

Officials of the Federal Communications Commission and the Columbia Broadcasting System, however, were not nearly so calm as they emerged from a shower of complaints from nerve-shaken dial twisters.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch, of the FCC, issued a formal statement saying that the C. B. S. broadcast of the Orson Welles version of H. G. Wells' "The War of the Worlds" was "to say the least, regrettable."

He telegraphed C. B. S. to send a transcription of the program at once, and the matter will be taken up by the commission today.

Other statements came from the president of the National Association of Broadcasters, a vice president of C. B. S., and others, but the last word came from the Harvard Astronomical Observatory.

The Harvard Observatory, responding to a request, issued a statement, according to the Associated Press, that there is no evidence higher forms of life, as known on earth, exist on the planet Mars. This put at rest any lingering fear of timid souls that even

British Make 'Strong Man' Defense Chief

Anderson Gets Post Quelled Bengal Revolt To End Confusion Revealed by Crisis

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Oct. 31.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain shook up his cabinet again today, taking in a new minister, Sir John Anderson, who will be assigned the formidable task of organizing the Nation's civilian population in preparation for military and industrial conscription if war should come despite the Munich "peace with honor."

Sir John will reorganize the air raids precautions bureau which was found wanting during the war scare over Czechoslovakia.

Runciman Rewarded

In other cabinet changes today Malcolm MacDonald, Colonial Secretary, was handed the additional job of Dominion Secretary, to succeed the late Lord Stanley, and Viscount Runciman was named Lord President of the Council in succession to Viscount Hailsham, who resigned to oblige the prime minister.

Lord Runciman, who had been eased out of the cabinet soon after Chamberlain became premier, is now returned to high office as a reward for his work as "unofficial" mediator at Prague, where his tact paved the way for the partition of Czechoslovakia without war.

By far the greatest interest attaches to the appointment of Sir John Anderson, the only really new face in a cabinet that is packed with the old, familiar faces of officialdom. Sir John was appointed to the sinecure post of Lord Privy Seal in succession to Earl de La Warr, who figured in last week's cabinet shakeup.

At the age of 56, Sir John is being hailed as a strong man who is urgently required to co-ordinate Britain's military and industrial efforts and eliminate the confusion and deficiencies that characterized the country's entry into war in 1914, and her preparations last month for defense against air raids.

Chamberlain Cautious

The lord privy seal, who no longer has any seal to care for, is free to handle whatever duties the prime minister may pile upon him, and Sir John, a glutton for work, will enjoy no sinecure. Actually, he will be the Prime Minister's Man Friday. Already he overshadows in importance the defense co-ordination minister, Sir Thomas Inskip.

Chamberlain is on record as opposed to the introduction of military conscription in peacetime. Neither is he quite ready to decree at this time the industrial mobilization which has been called for by leading figures, such as Earl Baldwin, the former prime minister. But the invitation to Sir John Anderson to join the cabinet does

Judge Demands Dayton Reopen Schools Today

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 31 (AP).—The seven members of Dayton's board of education appeared before Common Pleas Judge Null M. Hodapp today on contempt warrants, and heard the court demand the board reopen city schools by tomorrow afternoon under the threat that contempt proceedings would be prosecuted.

The schools were closed last Friday by board action because of an empty treasury and a $61,000 deficit. The closing affected 34,000 pupils. The board members refused to say whether they would obey.

The threat of contempt proceedings faced the board because schools failed to open today in defiance of an injunction.

Useless Legs Amputated Last Summer Talks of Becoming a Stenographer Mrs. Roosevelt's Roses Among Gifts

Martha Geesling held court yesterday in her Emergency Hospital room for a score of friends who arrived with birthday presents to express admiration for a 21-year-old girl's gallant battle against adversity.

They heard a cheerful flow of conversation from the lips of a girl who lost use of her legs more than 11 years ago, lost both by amputation this summer and now talks of plans to walk on artificial limbs and become a stenographer.

The place of honor among Martha's gifts was given two roses, pressed and framed, from a bouquet sent by Mrs. Roosevelt. Martha's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Geesling, of 1129 Seventeenth street northwest, were there, of course, and Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent of Children's Hospital, where the girl was taken on an August afternoon in 1927 after a sandbank caved in on her.

Miss Gibson remembers that Martha wanted much to continue the education broken off at the third grade, and, as time passed, forgot what she had known of reading and writing.

But Mrs. Elizabeth Goodman, volunteer social worker at the party yesterday, can tell how lessons began again a month ago in Martha's room in the surgical ward.

"So I may become a typist," the girl smiled.

Group Named To Draft Laws For Pedestrian

Other Cities Studied To Consult Civic Bodies Judge McMahon for It

By Howard F. Wentworth.

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed a special committee to draft pedestrian regulations, announcing at the same time that public hearings on the question would be held in December.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal were named to draw up laws governing pedestrian traffic. Van Duzer will handle details of the scheduled public hearings.

Pedestrian rules are to be drafted following a study of systems now employed by other large cities. The proposals will be submitted to various civic and business organizations for consideration before hearings are called, it was announced.

The plans were adopted as traffic and police officials met yesterday in the office of Engineer Commissioner David McCoach to discuss ways and means of curbing the city's rapidly rising pedestrian death rate.

McCoach suggested that Washington citizens be the final judges in deciding the controversial pedestrian control issue. He said he would not favor pedestrian regulations unless at least "95 per cent of the people are for it."

"It is for that reason," he said, "that Traffic Director Van Duzer has been instructed to prepare a comprehensive and definite program, complete in every detail, to

Registration Of Tubercular Patients Urged

Would List Newcomers Public Interest Cited Ruhland Reveals Plan

A regulation to require tuberculars entering the city to register with the Health Department will be recommended to the District Commissioners by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, it was disclosed yesterday.

Dr. Ruhland pointed out at present persons who know they are afflicted with the disease are making their homes in Washington and are not following up their treatments, begun, probably in clinics of other cities.

"It is in the interest of the patient himself, as well as the general public, that he register with the health department and receive treatments at our clinics," Dr. Ruhland stated.

Patients of private physicians coming into the city for residence usually continue treatments here. The physician is required by law to make a report to the health department.

The local clinical set-up for the treatment of tuberculars is capable of handling any normal increase of patients, Dr. Ruhland declared.

Dr. Ruhland said persons aware of their sickness would be held accountable if they did not register with health authorities, should the regulation receive the sanction of the Commissioners.

He stressed the public should be protected from such persons having the disease, and said this could be done only where the patient receives treatment.

Robert Woolsey, Film Comic, Dies

Malibu Beach, Calif., Oct. 31 (AP).—Robert Woolsey, 49, motion picture comedian, died today at his home here after a long illness. At his bedside were his wife, the former Mignone Reed, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Reed.

Woolsey, who teamed with Bert Wheeler in numerous comedies, had been suffering from a kidney ailment for the past 18 months, said Dr. Ralph Tandowsky, his physician. He finished one picture after being stricken, but then was forced to retire.

2 Czech Soldiers Die Fighting Nazis

Prague, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—A commission of German and Czechoslovak army officers tonight was reported investigating a shooting affray between border patrols of the two countries in which two Czech soldiers were killed and three wounded after a German patrol allegedly crossed the delineation line.

The German patrol was said to have penetrated into Czech territory to the town of Chrosdova Lhota, where one Czech soldier was wounded. The patrol then returned to Moravska Chrastova, where a skirmish occurred in which the two Czechs were killed.

125,000 See Halloween Parade Here

Two-Hour Pageant 2,000 Take Part Twelve Bands Play Mayors See Show

A radiant queen on a sparkling throne ruled over Washington last night as the joyous eve of Allhallows was ushered in with a gigantic parade that drew nearly 125,000 spectators to the curb of Constitution avenue.

Long-nosed witches and fleshly ghosts contrasted strangely with laughing children and smiling girls as the two-hour procession moved between cheering thousands from Fourth street to the reviewing stand at Fifteenth.

Costumes of every shape and hue and floats of every design kept the onlookers in a state of suspense that helped them forget the chill autumn air. The 2,000 participants and 12 blaring bands made the twelfth annual parade one of the most successful in the history of Halloween celebrations in the Capital.

Mayors in Stands

Beside local civic leaders in the reviewing stand sat the mayors and other officials of a dozen suburban communities. This was the first year, directors of the parade declared, that floats and bands had been entered from areas outside the District.

Opposite the reviewing stand and flanked by strings of brightly glowing bulbs was the royal throne, shimmering with diamonds and backed by a great round harvest moon that vied with the silvery light of a real half-moon in the cloudless heavens overhead.

Preceded by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and his escort; the Police Boys' Club Band and a smartly marching detachment of Job's Daughters, came the resplendent float that carried Nadine Petrey, Queen of 1938; J. Edmund Veitch, the King, and their court, including 10 pretty young women. The royal pair were seated beneath a huge jeweled crown in the center of the enormous float that carried the legend, "Her Majesty, Queen of Halloween."

The Queen Descends

As the Boys Club Band played "Pomp and Circumstance" before the reviewing stand, the Queen slowly descended from the float with her entourage, received a bouquet of golden chrysanthemums and then, to the applause of the audience, mounted the throne as it burst into brilliance under the glare of searchlights. Each of the ladies in waiting took her place in a sparkling frame of diamonds.

Once the King and Queen were seated—but not until they had appeased the insatiable demands of news photographers—the line of march moved forward.

Farmer Peppers Pranksters With Shot at Berwyn

A Halloween prank last night sent three Berwyn, Md., boys to doctors with gunshot wounds, while 78-year-old George Godey, Berwyn chicken farmer, was released under $1,500 bond on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Roland Wood, 15, and his brother, Milton, 11, were brought to Casualty Hospital, their bodies peppered with a blast from a shotgun. A companion, Jack McManus, 14, son of Sergt. William McManus, ROTC warrant officer at Maryland University, was slightly wounded.

Godey told police the boys had been throwing stones at his home. He said he fired what he believed to be a blank shell.

Railroad Pay Cut May Be Dropped At Parley Friday

GEORGE M. HARRISON, head of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, is shown in obvious good humor as he arrived at the White House yesterday to confer with the President on the railroad situation

Executives to Meet Roosevelt Consulted Legislation Pledged Strike 'Far Away'

By Robert C. Albright.

Early settlement of the rail wage dispute appeared in prospect last night as heads of the Nation's big railroads were called to a meeting in Chicago on Friday to accept or reject cancellation of a 15 per cent rail pay cut order.

The call was issued by John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads. Pelley declined to predict what the rail management verdict would be, but he said there is a general desire to reach a conclusion this week.

The carriers' joint conference committee, which had power of attorney from the railroads to negotiate the wage cut, meanwhile virtually decided to make no up or down recommendations to the railroads on the emergency rail board report.

Conference "Failed"

"We were appointed to negotiate a wage reduction," said H. A. Enochs, chairman of the conference committee. "We have failed, and we will ask them to discharge us. The matter will be handed back to the individual railroads for action."

Railway labor brotherhoods have voted to strike if the wage cut is put in effect. The President's three-man fact-finding board Saturday recommended that railroads abandon the cut. Yesterday President Roosevelt called both Pelley and George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, separately into conference. Mr. Roosevelt promised he would give full support to a program of legislation beneficial to the roads when rail labor and management agree on essential provisions.

Will Frame Legislation

An informal six-man committee, representing both rail management and labor, was set up last month by the President to frame such a program, but its conferences were called off after the second meeting as the wage-cut strike threat neared a showdown.

Both Pelley and Harrison yesterday predicted the conferences will be speedily resumed once the dispute is disposed of. Harrison forecast that sessions will resume in about ten days. Pelley said the President indicated the committee's personnel may be expanded.

The president of the Association of American Railroads said he will deliver a first-hand report of his interview with the President to the railway executives in Chicago on Friday. At the same time the carriers' joint conference committee, headed by Enochs, will report.

Strike Far Away

Asked what he thought of the prospects of a rail strike, Enochs last night told reporters:

"A railroad strike is so far, far away in my opinion, that there is no reason to get excited about it."

The joint conference committee was in session all day yesterday on the recommendations of the President's fact-finding committee. Sessions will be resumed today, and the group will meet again in Chicago on Thursday, one day in advance of the Association of American Railroads.

Although the conference committee has authority to recommend a course of action for the roads, Enochs said he did not think it would be "fair" to the railroads to do so. He said the committee may submit some general observations on the President's fact-finding report, but the policy decision of whether to accept or reject the emergency board recommendations will be up to the individual roads.

"We will say in effect that we have followed the law, and done

Dies Charges Reds, Cabinet Fought Probe

Aid Refused, He Says Writer Flays Inquiry Hits 'Fantastic Yarns'

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Committee on Un-American Activities asserted last night that Communists and Cabinet members had attempted to "stifle and discredit" his committee and its inquiry.

Sharply attacking the Dies group, in a radio broadcast which immediately followed the Congressman's, Paul Y. Anderson, Washington newspaper correspondent, asserted the committee was guilty of "extraordinary presentation and manipulation of witnesses and testimony" for political purposes. His talk was arranged by the Democratic National Committee.

"No Cross-Examination"

"Some of the most fantastic yarns ever heard outside of an insane asylum are gravely accepted by the committee without the faintest effort to discover whether the witnesses are credible or responsible, or whether they are actuated by ulterior motives," Anderson said.

"At no time is there anything which could be called cross-examination. Some of the yarns contain serious accusations against public officials and private citizens. These officials and these citizens are not present to defend themselves; they are never asked to be present; their first knowledge that they have been accused comes from reading the accusations in newspapers."

Dies Accuses President

Dies accused President Roosevelt, the Justice Department, and the WPA of ignoring a Congressional request that his committee be staffed with stenographers, investigators and attorneys from the executive departments.

Dies spoke over the Mutual Broadcasting System, after he had charged that many stations originally scheduled for inclusion in the chain had canceled his speech. He did not know the reason, he said, but thought it was "more of the same old thing."

Dies said that after a "campaign of ridicule" against the committee's activities had failed to curb the in-

Heart at Agonized Crescendo As Rifles Blast Life From Killer

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 31.—John W. Deering, convicted murderer, faced Utah's execution squad of five picked riflemen willingly and without apparent emotion at the State prison today, yet he literally was "scared to death."

Study of an electro-cardiograph film tonight disclosed Deering hid an extremely excited heart behind a "bold front."

The 40-year-old bushy-haired convict, behind prison bars most of his adult life, was executed for the killing of Oliver R. Meredith, jr., Salt Lake City businessman, during a robbery.

Deering smiled and spoke calmly as he emerged from "death row."

He walked unaided to the executioner's wooden chair against the rock wall and sat rigid, awaiting without a word four death-dealing bullets. One of the rifles held only a blank cartridge so that no rifleman could be sure he fired a fatal bullet. Despite his apparent calm, Deering's heart pounded like a trip-hammer.

Deering, deeming his life a failure, co-operated with scientists to record for the first time the actions of a human heart pierced by bullets.

"He put on a good front," said Dr. Stephen H. Besley, prison physician. "The electro-cardiograph film shows his bold demeanor hid

U. S. Warned Of Economic Aggression

Council Cautioned Preparedness Urged Father Walsh Speaks

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 31.—Eugene P. Thomas, president of the National Foreign Trade Council, today urged American business men and industrialists to mobilize for "economic preparedness" to meet the "threat of aggression."

Addressing the twenty-fifth annual convention of the council, Thomas said the "economic implications of the recent European crisis" are threefold:

"First, that the threat of aggression will be employed to attain economic objectives.

"Second, that we should be prepared resolutely to withstand such threats.

"Third, that since the ultimate objective of these threats is economic, we shall be blind to the manifest challenge if we fail to place our economic house in order, reinforced by all the resources of the Nation."

U. S. May Be Leader

"Leadership may fall to the United States. Economic preparedness of the nations opposed to threats of force will determine the outcome of the economic issues which are now shaping so clearly," Thomas said.

He added that it might be necessary to give this Government "authorization required to control foreign exchange when and to the extent necessary."

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, head of the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University, said "the events of the last week have served to focus attention on the future of American foreign trade."

Germany, Father Walsh declared, "is witnessing a gratifying adhesion to her policy on the part of Hungary, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Turkey, with Poland and Rumania still undecided but evidently to be included in this combination . . . which, in economics as well as in export practice, will be more inclined to follow the general trend set by Berlin rather than to negotiate directly through reciprocal trade treaties with the United States. There is the added fact that Japan, Germany's ally, has acquired complete control of the trade of China."

Aldrich Asks Gold Standard

Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, in a broadcast from Berlin, said the tripartite monetary agreement between United States, Britain and France should not only be continued but should be made more effective, to help in bringing about a return to gold as the international standard of value and exchange.

Richard C. Patterson, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said the United States must develop through voluntary co-operation a foreign trade promotion system "more effective than that which autocracy can establish by command."

Patterson said development of Latin-American markets was an all-important phase of this Nation's drive to expand its foreign trade.

Col. Ruppert Sees Upswing at Hand

New Orleans, Oct. 31 (AP).—Col. Jacob Ruppert told the sixty-third convention of the United Brewers' Association today in an amplified telephone talk that "the depression has run its course and American business is again headed for an upswing."

Ruppert, president of the 76-year-old organization, was unable to leave his New York home because of illness.

The colonel, who is owner of the New York Yankee baseball team, predicted the United States faced "its greatest business boom since prohibition's end."

Pa. G. O. P. Held 'Distorting' WPA Order Williams Complains to Sheppard Group

Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, yesterday complained to the Sheppard Campaign Expenditures Committee that an official order telling WPA workers they may vote as they please is being "distorted" in Pennsylvania to give the impression that Administrator Harry L. Hopkins has indorsed Judge Arthur R. James, G.O.P. nominee for Governor.

WILLIAMS

He displayed a telegram saying the radio news commentator of the Luzerne County Republican Committee had said in a broadcast on October 26:

"And here is a parting shot for you today; Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, has indorsed Arthur James."

The commentator, Williams said, admitted he based the assertion solely on the order assuring workers they might vote as they wish.

Williams also contradicted a recent news report that the truant officer at Hazleton, Pa., had found "a score of boys from the high school" working on WPA jobs and ordered them back to school.

He said he was advised that Fred Wilt, State director of employment in Pennsylvania, had reported the truant officer found 22 boys "who should have been in high school working for the highway department." None of them were working for the WPA, he said.

Still a third bit of political turmoil centered around the WPA in the Keystone State, when Senator Davis, Republican, charged that a group of WPA workers who are officials of the Progressive Voters League there had been summoned to Democratic headquarters in Pittsburgh on October 25 and told "to support the Democratic ticket or take the consequences."

Davis said the Progressive Voters League on October 23 had voted to support the Republican ticket, and he warned that if any of its members were demoted or discharged by the WPA he would ask the Sheppard committee to investigate the Allegheny County WPA headquarters.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31 (AP).—Attorneys Arthur W. Kopp, of Platteville, and William H. Spohn, of Madison, were appointed today by Attorney General Loomis as special counsel to investigate and conduct proceedings under the corrupt practices act against Julius P. Heil, of Milwaukee, Republican nominee for Governor.

John B. Chapple, running for Senator as an independent "Townsend Republican," charged that Heil and some of his supporters tried to "bribe" him with an offer of $2,600 for 26 speeches, to withdraw from the Senatorial race. Edward G. Ihlenfeldt, defeated gubernatorial candidate, claims Heil's campaign expenses exceeded the legal limit.

By the Associated Press.

Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, of the Department of Justice at Washington, yesterday stepped into a major campaign battle when in an address prepared for delivery before Democratic groups at Cleveland he said Robert Taft, Republican Senatorial candidate and son of former President Taft, possesses "every quality of leadership except vision."

Jackson expressed confidence that "Ohio's answer to the drive against Democracy and against its prophet, Franklin D. Roosevelt," would be re-election of Democratic Senator Bulkley and election of Charles Sawyer, Democratic candidate for Governor.

Wallace Opens New Deal Drive Against Dewey

Charges 'Distortion' Farm Claims Disputed Roosevelt to Speak

The Administration opened fire yesterday on Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for Governor of New York, when Secretary of Agriculture Wallace took him to task for remarks about farm conditions in New York State.

Wallace charged Dewey with "concealing," "covering up" and "distortion" in connection with farm income figures and the milk regulation program. Then the Secretary put in a kind word for the "worth" of Gov. Lehman, Democratic candidate for re-election.

"The cleverness of a prosecuting attorney in covering up inconvenient evidence is of no use in meeting the real problems of agriculture," Wallace declared. "It takes a straightforward facing of all the facts to do that."

The Wallace statement is expected to be only the first open Administration attack on Dewey personally. President Roosevelt, according to indications yesterday, will blast away at the Republican candidate in his radio speech from Hyde Park Friday.

In a statement, the Secretary of Agriculture quoted Dewey as having said that New York farm income had not gone up as much as the farm income of the rest of the Nation.

The Dewey speech was in reply to one by Lehman asserting that farm income in the State had increased 63 per cent in the past six years.

Wallace said Dewey failed to bring out that New York farm income did not drop as rapidly as in the Nation as a whole from 1929 to 1932.

"Mr. Dewey made the comparison with national farm income when it was useful to his candidacy but concealed the comparison when it wasn't," Wallace said. "Mr. Dewey covered up the part of the story which didn't fit his argument."

Dewey Charges Graft

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 31.—District Attorney Dewey tonight delivered two more campaign speeches here, the first charging corruption in Democratic urban machines, and the second discussing the State farm.

In his first address, the Republican candidate struck hard at conditions in Brooklyn which have brought about recurrent scandals and asserted that no Democratic State administration could be expected to clean up such a situation.

Crowds had greeted him earlier at Yonkers, Harmon, Poughkeepsie, Schenectady, Amsterdam, Little Falls, Fonda, Utica, Rome and Oneida.

Wagner 'Great Liberal'

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—President Roosevelt, in his first public statement indorsing any New York State candidate, praised United States Senator Robert F. Wagner as "a great liberal" in a letter made public today by the Progressive Republican Committee for Wagner.

Democrats Get $264,060 In 2 Months

Pay Out $238,741 $183,012 Unpaid Debts $75,000 Loan Listed

By the Associated Press.

The Democratic National Committee reported yesterday that it received $264,060 and spent $238,741 during the September 1-October 27 period.

It filed a statement with the clerk of the House, in accordance with the corrupt practices act, showing a balance of $25,319 on October 27 and unpaid obligations of $183,012.

The Republican National Committee reported last Friday that its receipts and expenditures for the same period were $491,603 and $469,318, respectively.

Of the Democratic receipts, a $75,000 loan from the Bank of Manhattan Co., New York City, and another of $50,000 from Sol Rosenblatt, of New York, accounted for nearly half. These loans also represented the bulk of the unpaid debts.

The largest individual contribution was $10,000 from Mrs. Margaret D. Biddle, Warsaw, Poland.

Contributors Listed

Other large contributors were George T. Crowley, Chicago, $6,000; Nicholas Schenck, New York; Henry Hooker, New York, and Sidney R. Kent, New York, $5,000 each; John Hush, New Orleans, $5,000; Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington, and Seton Porter, New York, $1,500 each; Boris Said, New York; I. A. O'Saughnessy, Wichita, Kans.; Nathan Straus, Washington; Mark Eisner, New York; Samuel Levy, New York; Col. Joseph Hartfield, New York; Malcolm S. McConihe, Washington, and Henry Morgenthau, sr., New York, $1,000 each.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday that agents of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee had obtained a statement from Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, relative to contributions made to his campaign fund by Federal employes. Sheppard declined to reveal contents of the letter.

50 Violations Reported

The letter, Sheppard said, will be laid before the committee at a meeting tomorrow. The committee has ruled that it is illegal for Federal employes to contribute directly to a Senator's campaign fund, or for the Senator, or any agent, to receive such a contribution.

The committee said it was informed that nearly 50 Federal employes had made donations to a committee sponsoring Bulkley's race for re-election.

D. C. Young Democrats To Hear Judge Curran

228,000 Left WPA Jobs in September, Williams Says, but Rolls Increased 43,400

Approximately 228,000 persons left WPA employment in September, 75 per cent of them voluntarily, Aubrey Williams, acting administrator, announced yesterday. The number, he said, represented 7.6 per cent of the total certified employment at the beginning of the month.

"Reviving activity in industry, which has been in progress several months," Williams said, "is only now beginning to have its effect on the general problem of need and unemployment.

"An increase of 24 per cent in the number of those who left WPA of their own accord in September as compared with August, is, I believe, evidence of more prosperous conditions in industry. If conditions in agricultural areas do not offset these gains, we can be confident of material reduction in total WPA employment.

"It is further proof, too, of the fact that the unemployed are eager for jobs and are not content with work relief when other employment becomes available."

Private employment was given definitely as their reason for leaving the WPA by 80,221 of the 173,202 who quit voluntarily, while 85,599 left without giving their reasons. William said of the latter group it was believed the majority had found jobs with private employers.

Although there was a net gain of 43,401 persons on WPA projects for the month, the percentage rate of separations was the largest since the present type of report was originated last May.

Wallace's New Plan 'Humane,' Says Caraway

By the Associated Press.

Senator Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, suggested yesterday that Congress obtain the views of "dirt farmers" on the present crop control law before any revisions are made.

She termed "humane" the proposal of Secretary Wallace to sell surplus foodstuffs at "bargain" prices to low income families.

Policy Kings Boosted Price After New Law

Became More Cautious Must Know You Now Harvest Still Great

This is the fifth and last of a series of articles resurveying the Washington numbers racket, six and one-half months after enactment of the new anti-lottery law.

By Edward T. Folliard

The chief consequence of the new antilottery law has been to make the numbers gamblers more cautious and cunning. Now the "writers" have to know you before they will accept a bet. However, since they had built up a huge business before the law was passed, this hasn't cramped them to the extent that might be expected.

Another consequence has been that the average amount of the bets has gone up. The racketeers have encouraged this. Now that the hazards are greater, they have argued that the bets ought to be greater, too.

Daily Harvest Huge

How many Washingtonians are playing the numbers game must necessarily remain a matter of conjecture. Some have estimated 100,000. The only persons who could prove, or disprove this would be the numbers kingpins themselves.

The fact that last week, after a chase, the vice squad found 10,000 numbers slips in the automobile of a "pick-up" man was significant, and tended to confirm the belief that the daily harvest of bets is enormous.

Violence Cut Down

Despite the disappointment in some quarters over the results of the new law, United States Attorney David A. Pine still regards it as an aid to law enforcement. He feels that it has made it easier to get convictions.

His records show that in the six and a half months period, there have been 58 indictments, 37 convictions, 2 not guilty cases and 1 nolle prosse. Of the remaining 18, 11 probably will be thrown out because of informer difficulties.

Pine is particularly comforted by the fact that no violence has been spawned by the numbers racket since the new law was passed. It was a murder—a "wrong man" murder—that first focused attention on the numbers racket hereabouts. The victim was Allen Wilson, a young newspaper route agent. He was killed in October, 1934, by hired gunmen who mistook him for Mickey McDonald, a numbers operator.

Today things are not going so well for Mickey. He escaped death, but the depression got him.

Meantime, the current bosses of the numbers racket would appear to be safe in the tolerant atmosphere of Prince Georges County, Md. Unmolested by the authorities, ignored even by the reformers, they send their agents into Washington to collect the daily bonanza.

They offer to pay 600 to 1 on the number that "hits." The odds in their own favor are 1,000 to 1. But that doesn't discourage the bettors. Capt. Little tells about the crowd that was sitting in court here one day, listening to the trial of a numbers racketeer. The prosecutor was explaining to the jury how the game worked, and, walking to a blackboard, he wrote down a hypothetical number.

There was a movement in the courtroom a little later. Some 15 or 20 of the spectators had been seized with a hunch. They went out and bet that number.

Slayer's Heart Pounds Crescendo of Fear As Execution Squad's Rifles Spurt Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Dr. Stephen H. Besley points to an unique cardiograph, the first ever made of a man's heart as bullets pierced it. The steady line shows John Deering's heart beats as he awaited the firing squad at Salt Lake City; the first flutter marks the impact of the bullets; the wild fluctuations are the death struggle, and the end is death itself the actual emotions pounding within him. He was scared to death."

Deering's heart beat, normally 72 per minute, rose to 180—nearly three times normal—the few minutes he was in the chair.

"Each time he was spoken to, his heart fluttered. The rhythm was very irregular," said Besley.

When Deering was asked for a final statement, his heart raced. It calmed after he spoke, and beat fast but even the remaining 30 seconds before the shots rang out.

When the bullets shattered the heart, the beat fluttered wildly, then gradually ebbed to a stop 15.6 seconds after Deering was shot. Physicians pronounced him dead 134.4 seconds after the heart stopped.

Dr. Besley said the test was of great benefit scientifically. It disclosed the effect of fear on the heart and how soon death occurs after a heart is wounded.

Deering, who confessed the murder and begged for an immediate execution, was ashen-faced as he walked to his death. He said he was satisfied, however, after willing his body to the University of Utah Medical School for study. His only relative, a sister in Chicago, agreed.

The corneas of his eyes were rushed to San Francisco, where a specialist will attempt to restore sight to a blind person. Refrigerated, the corneas will "keep" 48 hours.

U. S. Judge's Slayer Son Wins Parole to Visit Ill Mother

Sanity Board to Pass on Fitness for Leave Will Have Six Months Out of Prison Killed in Fight Over Girl's Kidnaping

By the United Press.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 31.—Phil Kennamer, son of a Federal judge, today was voted a 6-month "leave of absence" from the prison where he is serving a 25-year sentence for the society slaying of John Gorrell, jr.

The State pardon and parole board decided the 23-year-old Kennamer could leave to be with his mother after his father pleaded that Mrs. Kennamer might not live if her son remained in prison.

The parole will start when a sanity board determines whether young Kennamer is mentally fit to be free. Gov. E. W. Marland had announced he would abide by the board's decision. A three-man committee of the pardon board will appoint a guardian to remain with Kennamer.

The father of Kennamer's victim wept as he testified at the hearing today he did not believe Kennamer had "served enough time" to pay for the life he had taken.

Judge Franklin E. Kennamer had pleaded with the board to grant the youth the "vacation" to be with his mother, who will leave soon for Arizona for her health.

Kennamer was sentenced for the murder of young Gorrell on Thanksgiving Eve, 1934, in Tulsa where the boys were members of the socially prominent "High Hat" Club.

The two allegedly had argued over an extortion plot against Virginia Wilcox, beautiful young daughter of Homer F. Wilcox, oil millionaire, and Kennamer said he killed Gorrell in a struggle over a pistol.

Ohio Ineligible For U. S. Grants To Pension Aged

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board said yesterday it was unable to find, in effect, that Ohio was complying with its regulations and therefore eligible once again to receive Federal funds for old age pensions.

The board withheld an October grant of Federal funds for old age pensions for 111,000 persons in Ohio after finding there were administrative deficiencies in the State's division of aid for the aged.

The board said it "deeply regrets the needless suffering caused by the failure of the Ohio division of aid for the aged to furnish the information necessary for the Social Security Board to make a finding.

Ford Prophesies Farm Leadership For New England

Sudbury, Mass., Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Henry Ford, stating that New England was "potentially the greatest section in the world for industry and agriculture," tonight revealed plans to build a farm equipment factory in South Sudbury.

Explaining the factory was part of his "Back to the Soil" movement, Ford said, "New England's trouble lies in its failure to awaken to its greatness in the fields of industry and agriculture."

Arriving unexpectedly at his historic Wayside Inn here, Ford said the factory site already has been selected and power will be obtained from Hop Brook, which winds about his estate.

Rail Chiefs Call Parley to Settle Wage Problem

Rail

what we could, and here it is back to you," said Enochs.

'Can Get Together'

Following his conference with the President, Harrison, spokesman for the Railway Labor Executives Association, said his group is conferring and "ready to move forward." He said he had every reason to believe that rail management and labor "in a good many respects can get together."

Harrison revealed the President had repeated his desire that rail management and labor resume their efforts "to develop a program of legislation for general rehabilitation of the railroad industry."

"We assured the President," he said, "that labor would be happy to co-operate with the railroads and the President to fulfill his request."

President's Promise

Pelley, who saw the President at a separate conference, indicated a similar request was made of railroad management. He said the President promised to "do everything he could" to get enacted a program of legislation beneficial to the roads.

"Naturally there are a few things that could be done that would help, but they wouldn't solve the railroad problem," Pelley later told reporters.

He said he could only repeat what he told the President's fact-finding board, that while several proposals for helpful legislation are desirable, "there is no plan, there is none that can be made, there is none that can be put into effect that will meet this emergency that we are now in. There is nothing that can be done for this railroad industry that would obviate the necessity of prosecuting this wage reduction to the last."

Loans Held Unimportant

Pelley was asked if emergency loans at this time would be beneficial to the rail structure, and replied:

"I don't think the loan thing is a matter of importance anymore."

"If any such proposal is pending, I don't know anything about it," he added. "Jesse Jones (chairman of the RFC), told me he didn't either."

Pelley indorsed most of the 7-point railroad legislative program recently outlined by Chairman Harrison, of the Railway Labor Executives Association, and pointed out that the Association of American Railroads had a "long pull" program of legislation of its own. But he repeated that he thought no program would solve the problem.

All indications pointed to acceptance in Chicago Friday of the recommendations for pay cut withdrawal, at least by a majority of the larger roads, but no management spokesman would predict this officially.

Once a decision is reached ending the dispute, the President's informal committee on rail legislation is expected to resume sessions interrupted by the controversy. This committee (which may be enlarged) now includes Carl R. Gray, vice president of the Union Pacific; M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania; and Ernest E. Norris, president of the Southern, representing rail management, and Harrison, D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor.

"They probably will meet immediately this (the wage dispute) is out of the way," said Pelley. "And we ought to get it out of the way this week."

Mars

though the Martian conquest did not occur Sunday night, it might at some later date.

British newspapers compared the panic in the United States to a similar scare in England in 1926 when the British Broadcasting Co. put on a skit describing a mob sacking Whitehall, the government section of London.

In Germany the radio scare was hailed as the "indescribable result of war agitation" and Nazi newspapers chortled freely over the American response to a "war scare."

Columbia officials, in illustrating their efforts to eliminate objectionable material from the network broadcasts, called attention to their cancellation of programs causing children to become highly excited and emotional.

Although the FCC chairman promised prompt action, other officials admitted off the record that the commission is powerless to do more than reprove C. B. S. and warn it against similar broadcasts without more adequate safeguards.

Columbia, however, forestalled the commission on this approach by announcing that the C. B. S. program department henceforth will eschew the realistic technique "of a simulated news broadcast within a dramatization when the circumstances of the broadcast could cause immediate alarm to numbers of its listeners."

Reprimand Recalled

It was recalled that the FCC last year reprimanded the National Broadcasting Co. for a different sort of broadcast, a Garden of Eden episode with Mae West and Charlie McCarthy, which brought a flood of protests from shocked listeners.

Already smarting as a result of unfavorable reaction to an attempt to call Station WCTN, Minneapolis, and other N. B. C. affiliates on the carpet for a broadcast of Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer prize play "Beyond the Horizon," the FCC is now wary of any move that may be labeled censorship of programs.

Craven Backs McNinch

Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, who was one of the members who forced the commission to reverse itself on the O'Neill play, yesterday issued a statement supporting McNinch in his action regarding the C. B. S. program but at the same time warning against any attempt at censorship.

"I feel that in any action which may be taken by the commission," he said, "utmost caution should be utilized to avoid the danger of the commission censoring what shall not be said over the radio.

"Furthermore, it is my opinion that the commission should proceed carefully in order that it will not discourage the presentation by radio of the dramatic arts. It is essential that we encourage radio to make use of the dramatic arts and the artists of this country. The public does not want a spineless radio."

So far as could be learned none of the commissioners heard the broadcast. Several confessed they were listening to Charlie McCarthy.

"I withhold final judgment until later," McNinch said, "but any broadcast that creates such general panic and fear as this one is reported to have done is, to say the least, regrettable."

Standard Suggested

George Henry Payne, who frequently has quarreled with Chairman McNinch, for once, was on the same side as he suggested that the commission establish a "standard of broadcasts."

Recalling that last fall he campaigned against terrorism in children's radio programs, Payne said:

"People who have material broadcast into their home without warnings have a right to protection. Too many broadcasters have insisted that they could broadcast anything they liked, contending that they were protected by the prohibition of censorship.

"Certainly when people are injured morally, physically, spiritually and psychically, they have just as much right to complain as if the laws against obscenity and indecency were involved."

Herring Plans Bill

Senator Clyde Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, said he planned to introduce a bill in the next Congress "controlling just such abuses."

City Manager Paul Morton, of Trenton, N. J., locale of the Martian "invasion," said he would demand an investigation by the FCC "with the view of preventing recurrence."

Neville Miller, newly elected president of the National Association of Broadcasters, released a statement saying that Columbia and "those of us in radio have only the most profound regret."

"This instance emphasizes the responsibility we assume in the use of radio and renews our determination to fulfill to the highest degree our obligation to the public," he said.

W. B. Lewis, C. B. S. vice president in charge of programs, said that "in order that this may not happen again, the program department hereafter will not use the technique" if there is any likelihood of disturbing the listeners.

Washington representatives of C. B. S. were torn between the desire to rejoice over the publicity which the incident brought and the fears that were aroused by threats of damage suits.

Suits Threatened

Several threatened suits were rumored, one around the FCC, but a spokesman for Columbia said that only one was received in Washington and that by telephone. A person who did not give his name said he would sue Columbia "for every cent you've got" because the broadcast had upset an invalid relative.

The story around the commission was that one complainant had said he would sue the network for $100,000 on a similar grievance.

Strange stories of public reaction to the H. G. Wells fantasy continued to come from all parts of the country.

One local report, which could not be confirmed, was that a Washington Red Cross official, upon tuning in on the program, tried to organize a disaster relief crew at once.

Incidentally, the indomitable Charlie bobbed up in the C. B. S. affair as the story went the rounds that Charlie's head, which fell during the Sunday night broadcast, was shot off by a Martian death ray.

The nearest incident, however, to the Mars invasion, it was said, was the impersonation of President Coolidge by the late Will Rogers which was mistaken by thousands for an actual Presidential address.

The communications act, in fact, prohibits the commission from exercising any censorship save where a station broadcasts profanity or obscenity.

Brown Joins 'Kidding'
Makes Him Toot Horn

Practically the entire personnel of the police traffic division stood in the office of its commander, Capt. Milton D. Smith, yesterday and heard him blow a ten-cent tin horn at the command of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police.

They also heard him admit that his wife was boss of his household and read a note attached to the horn which suggested:

"You're always sounding off. Try this one. it's musical."

There was no malice in the "ribbing" which Capt. Smith was forced to take from Maj. Brown, all police inspectors, the men under his command and most of the clerical staff at Police Headquarters.

His Fiftieth Birthday

The occasion was his fiftieth birthday and the program had been arranged with consent of Maj. Brown. The party was given in fun. A handsome electric desk clock, many vases of flowers, ice cream and cake went with it.

Capt. Harvey G. Callahan, First Precinct, was master of ceremonies.

Under orders from his chief, Capt. Smith opened the large pile of presents on his desk. On top was a picture of Mrs. Smith. Somebody asked if there was "any significance in that. "The boss, maybe, . . .?" a heckler put in.

Admits Wife's "the Boss"

"She's the boss alright," the captain said.

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away and might improve your disposition.

Two miniature cops said: "Here's some that won't talk back."

A toy horse was tagged: "Try riding this for a while."

On the wall in Capt. Smith's office was nailed a huge sign, made in the form of a greeting card. It said: "Congratulations to THE CAPTAIN from the Slaves."

Group Named To Draft Laws For Pedestrian

Control

submit to every citizen organization in the city before the hearings."

Corporation Counsel Seal will confer with Van Duzer on legal aspects of the proposed laws.

Should the rules be enacted, said McCoach, they would apply only in the downtown area south of Florida avenue and on arterial highways extending to the District limits until a trial period satisfied officials the experiment was a success.

Following the District Building conference, an executive meeting of the Commissioner's advisory committee on traffic safety indorsed pedestrian control in general and agreed with plans to submit the question for public consideration.

Judge John P. McMahon, of Police Court, a guest at the meeting, spoke for the first time on proposals to establish pedestrian control laws and urged that "careful thought" be given to the drafting of such rules.

"I heartily favor some sort of pedestrian control," said Judge McMahon, after Van Duzer had pointed out that more than 70 per cent of all local traffic fatalities are pedestrians. "But I believe it should be done right if we are going to do it at all."

He suggested that methods in other cities be analyzed; that ample time be taken to study the problem and that laws which are finally adopted should "hold water" against all odds—legal and otherwise.

It was proposed also at the meeting to increase the District's 22-mile-an-hour speed limit to 25 miles as an "absolute" maximum. The increase, said Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the advisory committe, would serve as a safety measure if rigid enforcement was supported by the courts.

Quantico Marines Wept and Prayed During 'Invasion'

Hard-boiled United States Marines wept and prayed in their barracks at Quantico, Va., in the wave of terror which swept the country after the Mercury Theater's over-realistic broadcast of "The War of the Worlds," a young leatherneck told The Post yesterday.

He said he rushed to Quantico from a date in Washington with his best girl because he knew the Marine Corps was first to be called in time of danger, only to find fellow fighters protesting "they didn't want to go to war in the winter."

A bugler had to be restrained from giving assembly call after the broadcast, he added.

Stole Secrets ForFatherland, Voss Declares

An American Citizen Thanks Only Profit Girl Tells Flirtation

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 31.—A statement quoting Otto Hermann Voss, tall, thin aviation mechanic, as saying he gave construction secrets of United States Army and Navy planes to German agents "for Germany and not for money," was read into the record today at the spy trial in Federal Court.

Voss, one of three persons on trial, stood stoically erect, in German military fashion, during the reading. His counsel objected to admission of the "confession" on the ground that it was not voluntary. His codefendants are Johanna Hofmann and Erich Glaser.

Reported to Bremen

In the statement given to Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, Voss, a naturalized American citizen, told of exposing construction secrets of planes to both Karl Eitel and Herbert Jaenichen, accused as Nazi agents, who are fugitives from the indictment.

The statement said he reported to Capt. Lieut. Erich Pfeiffer, chief of German naval intelligence in Bremen, another absent defendant, and was thanked profusely for the good he had done his native land.

Voss was employed at the Seversky airplane factory at Farmingdale, Long Island.

His statement said: "The only money I ever received was $75 which was for expenses on my trips to a hotel to report to the German agents.

"I never expected to receive any money. I told both Eitel and Jaenichen, and made it expressly clear, that I didn't want any money, but was doing it solely for the fatherland."

Before the statement was read, slim, blonde Eleanor C. Boehme, a Hunter College graduate of 1936, described efforts of Karl Schlueter to make appointments with her, and related she once received a match book with hieroglyphs inside the cover.

Code Was Used

The Government contends that Schlueter, another fugitive defendant, sent secret messages to agents here through the medium of match books.

Miss Boehme, American-born of German parentage, said Schlueter, who was a steward on the liner Europa, "showed interest in my school work—I had been majoring in German—and mentioned the possibility of employment in Radio City" when he was graduated.

She said Kate Moog, who testified earlier for the Government, gave her the match book "in a sort of secretive fashion, when she shook hands with me after inviting me to tea."

Miss Boehme said she was a little frightened and was eager to leave. She showed the match book to her mother later, and threw it away.

Miss Moog testified Friday that Schlueter gave her the match book to hand to Miss Boehme, and she didn't know, until Federal agents told her, that it contained a secret code.

Postage Rate Cut To Aid Book Sales

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt ordered the domestic postage on books reduced to one and one-half cents a pound yesterday, asserting he hoped this would stimulate "cultural growth, education and development of the American people."

At present books come under parcel post rates which range from 7 cents a pound upward, depending upon the zone. The new rate, effective November 1 to June 30, 1939, is the same, irrespective of the destination point.

Stephen Early, press secretary, said the President acted at the behest of educational, religious and other groups.

Bank Does Business 2 Hours Under Guns of Girl Bandit, Pal

Unsuspecting Customers Come and Go Pair Covers Clerks Unseen Till Vault Opens Then They Take $10,000 and Flee

By the Associated Press.

Brookings, S. Dak., Oct. 31.—A man and a girl, the latter described as "about 18 years old and cute" robbed the Northwest Security National Bank of between $10,000 and $15,000 today.

For two hours at pistol point they compelled employes to transact business, while they waited for the time vault to open. Scores of persons passed in and out of the bank, unaware masked guns were trained on the employes.

Bank officials said the pair "cleaned out" the institution, taking even notes and personal papers of depositors. As they fled eastward they spread tacks in the road to hinder would-be pursuers.

Employes of the bank described the man as 30 and roughly dressed. Both he and his companion wore glasses.

Cashier John Torsey said the male robber accosted him at the bank door at 8:30 this morning, pressed a pistol to his side:

"This is a holdup. Walk in as if nothing had happened.

Youth Under Bond After Fatal Crash

Vincent Vaccaro, 22, of 222 Eleventh street, southeast, driver of the automobile which plunged into a tree near Suitland, Md., early yesterday killing his mother, Anna Vaccaro, 48, of the same address, and his sister-in-law, Helen Vaccaro, 22, of Soutland, was free today on $500 bond after being held earlier on a technical charge. Magistrate J. R. Creecy, who set the bond, ordered an investigation of the crash.

Vaccaro said he was driving his sister-in-law back to her home in Suitland, when the accident occurred.

$10 Fine Levied in First Anti-Smoke Law Case

The first prosecution in Police Court under the anti-smoke law which was enacted nearly three years ago resulted in a $10 fine for Harry L. Burka, proprietor of a laundry in the 5100 block Conduit road northwest yesterday.

Burka was hailed into court on the complaint of District Smoke Inspector George E. Parker, who told Judge Walter J. Casey that Burka broke an agreement in which he promised to use hard coal while an automatic stoker was being repaired.

Funds for Wake Arrive Too Soon

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Oct. 31 (AP). George S. Wright planned a good time for his friends at his wake when he took out a $1,000 insurance policy for that purpose ten years ago, but he'll have the fun instead.

The policy matured today and Wright collected the $1,000.

"Most of my old friends are dead and they couldn't have come anyway," philosophized the 70-year-old Council Bluffs attorney.

200-Mile Bayonet Ring North of Yangtze Claims Are Disputed

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Nov. 1.—Japanese north of the Yangtze River were reported rapidly closing a ring of bayonets 200 miles in circumference tonight in which they expected to trap 300,000 Chinese soldiers retreating from the tricity area of Hankow, Hanyang and Wuchang, which fell a week ago to the invaders.

The Japanese, after the occupation of Hanyang, pushed rapidly up the Han River and were reported to have occupied Hanchwan, 60 miles by river to the west.

At Tsian, 125 miles southeast of Hankow in a direct line, the situation remained obscure. Japanese reported last week they had captured the stronghold and said today their forces had advanced 3 miles beyond it. Chinese said their troops continuously were repulsing Japanese attacks and were inflicting heavy punishment.

(A Hankow dispatch said the tightening of Japanese military restrictions in the fallen provisional capital resulted in incidents which led to protests from United States and British authorities but settlements were reached amicably.

(Canton advices reported the Japanese were driving north and west of that southern metropolis. Wuchow, inland port 90 miles west of Canton, was being evacuated under pressure of Japanese warplane bombardments. To the north, Japanese captured Kwangmoon, 80 miles from Canton.)

In Nanking officials of the Japanese inspired and dominated Nanking reform and Peiping provisional governments gathered for their second joint conference to discuss specific measures by which the two regimes would be amalgamated into a Japanese-sponsored central government to replace Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's.

It was reported in Peiping at the same time that the United States consulate in Tsinan, Shantung province, would be reopened soon. It has been closed since August 27, 1937.

Under reported terms of the Italo-German agreement, Hungary would get Galanta, which is 28 miles inland from the present frontier; Levice, Lucenec, Rosnova and Kosice.

Czechoslovakia, however, would retain several of her principal Slovakian cities, including Bratislava, which is 30 miles west of Galanta and close to the Austrian border. She also would keep Nytra.

British Blow Up Arab Village as Punitive Measure

51 Senators Sign Petition On Palestine

194 House Members 30 Governors Listed Handed to President

A petition signed by 51 Senators, 30 Governors and 194 Representatives was presented to President Roosevelt yesterday, reaffirming the sympathy of the American people with the Jewish rebuilding of Palestine.

It urged "that there be indicated to the British government our earnest hope that the doors of Palestine will be kept open for the Jewish refugees now suffering cruel oppression in European lands."

The petition was handed to the President on eve of the twenty-first anniversary of the Balfour declaration which pledged the British government to support establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine.

The emergency committee on Palestine, which sponsored it, announced that President Roosevelt had received more than 10,000 individual telegrams and memorial resolutions from individuals, ministerial associations and fraternal, civic and religious organizations protesting against the reported British plan to bar further Jewish emigration to the Holy Land.

The petition was fashioned like an ancient scroll of law. The text was printed on parchment that is used by Jewish scribes to engrace the Pentateuch or reading in the synagogues. At each end of the parchment were scroll handles such as are used to lift aloft the scrolls as they are read in the synagogues on the Sabbath and holidays.

"If our Government," it said, "can in this critical hour in the history of the Jewish people help keep open the one door through which oppressed Jews have entered into freedom and hope, we shall have rendered an historic service to the cause of enlightened mankind."

Arabs Call a General Strike To Balk British Ban on Travel

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Oct. 31.—Arab rebel leaders today ordered a three-day general strike beginning tomorrow in an attempt to frustrate a British military order requiring all male residents over 16 years of age to obtain permits for travel.

Rebel leaders already had warned the Arab population against taking out permits on pain of death.

On the other hand British authorities have insisted the government had no alternative but to arrest all who were not provided with the passes which permit travel between urban areas.

Would Disrupt Traffic

If rebel strike orders are carried out a serious predicament threatened. Traffic would be disrupted throughout the country, forcing all travelers to employ Jewish or British chauffeurs.

This in turn would expose everyone riding Jewish or British conveyances to attack from the rebels.

Jewish national institutions today called out all Jews on a "solidarity strike," lasting until nightfall, when special canvassers collected money for funds to be used in Jewish defense.

Jaffa Is Captured

By the Associated Press.

Palestine, Oct. 31.—British troops today seized control of Jaffa, the largest purely Arab town in Palestine, with its 50,000 population, and clared it of Arab rebels who had made it a headquarters in their fight against British rule.

At dawn 2,000 picked British troops from Sarafand and Jerusalem made a surprise raid on the sleeping populace. The raid was part of a drive which the British army is making against rebel strongholds in order to pave the way for orderly introduction of new reforms based on the report of a British partition commission. Other large cities previously cleared of rebels are Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Gaza.

In entering the city, the British employed artillery for the first time during the present revolt. While the army with the aid of police made a systematic search of the crowded city, additional British units cordoned the town into five districts and imposed a 24-hour curfew.

Other units surrounded Jaffa in order to prevent rebels from escaping. Customs motorboats armed with machine guns patrolled the harbor to block any attempt of rebels to flee by sea.

After day-long searches military authorities detained 70 suspected Arabs at the race course. Some were charged with bomb throwing, others with planting mines.

Statistics compiled from authoritative but unofficial sources showed that Holy Land strife in the last four months has cost 1,317 lives, with an additional 1,141 wounded. This exceeded the combined total of casualties for the two previous years. As in previous insurrections, the Arabs have suffered most.

The Society of Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy has collected more than $5,300 in the past three months with which to purchase food, clothing and medical supplies shipped to Spain on the relief ship yesterday.

The money was raised through mass meetings, dances, parties and direct canvassing. An additional $5,000 was sent the Spanish government by the local organization of the Central Spanish Committee for Republican Spain.

'Flying Battleship' To Leave for Coast

The 24-ton flying boat, built by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, of San Diego, Calif., flew here non-stop last week from San Diego in slightly over 13 hours, in what Navy officials said was the first transcontinental non-stop flight for a seaplane of that size.

Wealthy Friend Accuses Count of Swindling Him

Boston, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Count Gustaf G. von Frederick zu Brandenburg, 38-year-old nobleman, was arrested here today on a charge of larceny of $30,484.24 from W. F. Handschumaker, wealthy Boston meat wholesaler.

Brandenburg, charged in the warrant with taking the money between 1935 and the present, protested to police "it all is a mistake" and contended the money was given to him in the form of loans.

The loans, police said he told them, were advanced by Handschumaker out of friendship for his family to save his estates from being taken for non-payment of taxes.

and the unrestricted movement of money. Moreover, England will be much more concerned than this country with a French ban on flight of capital, and it will be necessary to obtain British consent under the agreement. Recent heavy British gold losses to this country have been partially offset by gold imports from France.

[Meanwhile, the French cabinet split over decrees proposed to cure France's financial crisis, the Associated Press said.

[Because of the split, the ministers decided to forego tomorrow's All-Saint's Day holiday to meet again to consider the financial measures as well as others dealing with the nation's economic and social structure.—Editor's note.]

May Ban Gold Hoarding

One group of cabinet members, regarding the monetary question as the crux of the recovery program, proposed the government impose regulations similar to those adopted by the United States in 1933 to prohibit private gold hoarding and regulating foreign exchange transactions, credit transfers and exports abroad of currency.

This group insisted such regulations would not contravene the tripartite monetary accord, inasmuch as they have been employed in the United States and would not be intended to control foreign exchange. Instead, they explained, the measures would prevent the further flight of capital from France and force hoarders to surrender gold.

On the basis of these demands, the government decided to ask Washington whether the United States would consider such regulations on France's part as incompatible with the tri-partite agreement.

If such measures are held by Washington to be incompatible with the three-power accord, the United States was asked to consider modification of the agreement to permit the regulations.

The government was understood to have decided to make clear, in its communication to Washington, that France has no intention of imposing foreign exchange control but urgently requires some means to force hoarders to surrender about 20,000,000,000 or 30,000,000,000 francs in gold, prevent further exports of capital and gain firm control of the franc's parity.

In his diplomatic talks during the day, Bonnet prepared the ground for an anticipated early settlement of various Franco-German and Franco-Italian differences and it was anticipated in government quarters that the next 30 days would bring these developments:

Germany's renunciation of any territorial claims in Europe against France—a pledge already publicly stated by Hitler—as the basis for the gentlemen's "no war" agreement.

Re-establishment of normal French diplomatic relations with Italy, leading to a general understanding with Premier Mussolini.

Enforcement by mid-November of the April 16 Anglo-Italian pact of friendship, thereby bolstering the framework of the four-power alignment.

Grant of belligerent rights to the Spanish insurgents and loyalists by the London nonintervention committee, on the basis of Mussolini's withdrawal of 10,000 troops from Spain.

A settlement of the Czechoslovak-Hungarian territorial dispute by Italo-German arbitration, beginning when German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano meet Wednesday at Vienna.

Poncet at the war office, then returned to the foreign office and conferred with Sir Eric Phipps, British Ambassador. Later he talked with the German Ambassador, Count Johannes von Welczek; the Italian Charge d'Affaires, Renato Prunas, and the new French Ambassador to Berlin, Auguste Voulondre, who was called from Barcelona to replace Francois-Poncet.

'Iron Man' Joins British Cabinet To Aid Defense

London

mean that Chamberlain is determined to tighten up the government's preparations for war and eliminate some of the scandalous muddling that was disclosed last month.

First of all, Sir John must reorganize "A. R. P."—the air-raid precautions system which turned out to be quite unsystematic and amateurish, although the government had lavished millions of pounds on it.

Next Anderson will organize some form of national register to give the government exact information on the potential manpower and womanpower of the nation.

Britain's newest "co-ordinator," Sir John is known to the headline-makers as "The Strong Man of Bengal," having ruled with an iron hand as governor of Bengal, where he suppressed the latest terrorist movement without flinching. He escaped assassination on three occasions.

His Rise Rapid

Returning to London at the end of last year, his long career as a civil servant finished, Sir John began a remarkable rise in politics. In January he was appointed to the privy council; in February he was elected M. P. for the Scottish universities in succession to the late Ramsay MacDonald. He was offered the chairmanship of Imperial Airways at $50,000 annually, but rejected it rather than leave Parliament. He was responsible for drafting the recent plan for the evacuation of civilians from London in Wartime.

In less than a year he broke into the cabinet. If he makes good in the additional duties now thrust upon him, he will inevitably be mentioned among the eligibles when Chamberlain resigns his premiership.

Gen. Degoutte Dies; Chief in Rhineland

Lyon, France, Oct. 31 (AP).—Gen. Joseph Degoutte, former commander of the allied armies in the Rhineland, died today at the age of 72.

Death came to the aged general at his home in the village of Charnay near here. Despite long retirement from active service he was a member of the general staff until his death.

France Bars Alien Loyalist Wounded

Perpignan, France, Oct. 31 (AP).—France refused today to allow 300 wounded foreign soldiers, including 54 Americans, to enter France from government Spain.

A trainload of men from the government's international forces was stopped at the border and only 69 Frenchmen were allowed to cross. The others were halted apparently on grounds they were without funds. It was expected they would be returned to Barcelona pending settlement of the problem.

Virginian Heads Wage Act Unit at San Juan

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Oct. 31 (AP). Robert W. Claibourne, a native of Petersburg, Va., and a resident of Puerto Rico in recent years, returned from Washington yesterday to take charge of the wage and hour law on the island.

He said the same policy would be followed here as in the United States.

Autographs to Aid Chinese Refugees

After signing 5,000 autographs in two days, Anna May Wong went back to her work as an actress with something approaching writer's cramp.

The Chinese star of "King of Chinatown" was one of the central figures in the two-day Moon Festival commemorating the founding of the Chinese Republic. The festival closed last week.

Miss Wong, at the request of local Chinese, opened an autograph booth at the festival and autographed approximately 5,000 photographs for her fans. Proceeds from the celebration went to Chinese war relief.

Soviets Decorate 6,500 in East

Moscow, Oct. 31 (AP).—Long lists of names of persons decorated for service in the Far East fighting with Japan at Changkufeng last August again crowded Moscow's newspapers today.

The new lists raised to more than 6,500 the total of Red army officers, soldiers, hospital workers and others honored for the brief campaign which Soviet Russia regards as a victory.

Batista to Visit Capital in State

Havana, Cuba, Oct. 31 (AP).—Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of the Cuban army, will arrive in the United States for Armistice Day ceremonies with much of the panoply of a visiting potentate.

A decree signed by President Laredo Bru today authorized Col. Batista to take with him to Washington Lieut. Col. Francisco Tabernilla, military aide; Commandant Julio Arguelles, naval aide; Capt. Owen Parr, of the army, and Capt. Jorge Hernandez.

Quick Relief for

DEEP RASPY COUGHS

(DUE TO COLDS)

If that cold has caused throat or bronchial irritation, put a small lump of Vicks VapoRub on your tongue and let it melt. Feel VapoRub's medication bathe the irritated membranes as it slowly trickles down your throat—bringing comforting relief—where you want it—when you want it. Next, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Then breathe in the steaming medicated vapors for a few minutes. As these vapors work their way down through the irritated air-passages, they loosen the phlegm and ease the cough. The relief that VapoRub brings will delight you.

9,000 Jews Huddled on German Border, Their Fate in Hands of Nazi-Polish Parley

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 31.—Some 9,000 Polish Jews huddled together in temporary quarters tonight on the German side of the Polish frontier, anxiously awaiting results of negotiations in Warsaw.

They hoped their lot might be more favorable than that of an estimated 13,000 Poles, mostly Jews, who were dumped across the border into Poland up to last Saturday midnight.

It appeared these 13,000 would not be permitted to return to Germany. Once having been conveyed across the frontier they were regarded as "checked out" and reentry would amount to the illegal return of undesirable, deported aliens.

Mostly Men

Unless Poland has powerful arguments to advance for those already returned to their homeland it semed likely the diplomatic conversations would center on those who were quartered on the border but had not yet been taken across when a truce was called in the movement. The estimated 9,000 waiting on the border were mostly men.

Germany has been represented as fearing thousands of Poles living in the Reich were about to lose their citizenship under a Polish regulation requiring the revalidation of all Polish passports held abroad by last Saturday midnight.

Jews were the first objects of swift, mass deportations.

Relief Facilities Taxed

Finding shelter and food and later homes and jobs for those already returned to their homeland caused the Polish government and private relief organizations considerable concern.

Having neither friends nor money these repatriated Poles became public charges.

In Warsaw one outstanding difficulty was attributed to the fact many had been away from Poland so long that they no longer have relatives or friends able to look after them. Those returned from Germany were said to have been permitted to take only 10 marks (about $4) apiece with them.

Jews to Seek Havens

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The American Jewish Congress today adopted a resolution urging the executive committee of the World Jewish Congress to study the problem of migration and find new lands for their people.

The resolution stated world Jewry should not co-operate with governments in the organization of enforced mass emigration.

"The denationalization of Jews by countries wishing to enrich themselves by expropriating and exiling their Jewish citizens, far from achieving the solution of the Jewish question, can only be regarded as a deliberate attempt on Jewish existence which must be met by the strongest resistance of the Jewish people," the resolution said.

Kidnaped Cuban Infant Found Alive; 3 Held

Cardenas, Cuba, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Ricarda Rodriguez, 3-month-old mulatto girl, whose kidnaping last week was feared by police to be connected with a revival of voodo rites involving human sacrifices, was found alive today at the home of a colored couple here.

The colored pair and a third person were arrested. The infant was snatched from her crib Wednesday night.

Belgians Answer 'No' To Colonial Demands

Brussels, Oct. 31 (AP).—Belgium answered today with a flat "No" to suggestions that she might contribute in a general redistribution of colonial territory to meet Germany's demands.

Albert de Vleeschouwer, minister of colonies, declared "we did not steal" the Belgian Congo and "nobody will steal it from us . . . The Belgian Congo will remain Belgian."

N. Y. Times Backs G.O.P. in Senate Races

Favors O'Brian, Corsi
News Urges Democrats
Both Indorse Lehman

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 31.—The New York Times, independent Democratic newspaper, which supported Democratic Senator Robert F. Wagner in 1932, denied him its indorsement tonight, giving its preference to Republicans for the two New York senatorships.

Having already indorsed Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Democrat, for re-election, the Times' editorial page announced its support of John Lord O'Brian for the long Senate term and Edward F. Corsi for the short term, after receiving replies in public addresses to six questions which it put to the senatorial candidates.

News Backs Democrats

The Daily News, independent morning tabloid, which has wholeheartedly supported the New Deal, gave its indorsement to Wagner and Representative James M. Mead, Democratic candidate for the short term. It also indorsed Gov. Lehman over his Republican opponent, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

Praising Lehman as "a good Governor," the lead editorial in the News also lauded Dewey as "a bold and energetic young prosecutor," but declared his "experience in a job like the governorship is nil."

While calling all four Senatorial candidates "able men," the Times said O'Brian and Corsi had shown, in their answers to the Times' questions, a greater independence of the present trend in Washington than had Wagner or Mead.

Wants Stronger Minority

Though it supported President Roosevelt in 1932 and somewhat belatedly in 1936, the Times said: "The experience of many years demonstrates that the Democratic system needs a strong party of opposition."

Observing that the Republicans have far fewer Congressional spokesmen than their numerical strength entitles them to have, the editorial added:

"In these circumstances there are sound reasons for desiring to strengthen the party of opposition in the Senate, where this can be done through the election of liberal Republican candidates of caharacter and ability."

Col. Bristol Takes Over at Soldiers Home

Col. Matt O. Bristol, retired, English-born officer with nearly 40 years' active service in the Army, today relieves Col. William M. Morrow, retired, as deputy governor of the United States Soldiers' Home in Washington.

BRISTOL

Col. Bristol, who was appointed to the three-year tour of duty by Secretary of War Woodring, enlisted in the Cavalry during the Spanish-American War and fought in Cuba in 1899. Commissioned a second lieutenant in 1901 he served in the Philippines and Texas prior to the World War.

From October, 1917, to October of the following year he was on duty in Washington with the remount service in the Quartermaster General's office. He then sailed to France as chief of the division of remount of the A. E. F.

MORROW

After the war, Col. Bristol transferred to the finance department and spent four years in the office of the chief of finance in Washington. He also served in Omaha and San Antonio, and was retired on reaching the age of 64 a year ago.

Col. Morrow, whom Col. Bristol replaces, has served as deputy governor of the Soldiers' Home since 1933, three years after he retired from the Army because of age. He began his Army career as a private in 1888.

Col. Morrow holds the Distinguished Service Cross and the silver star citation for gallantry in action. He was also awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for conspicuous success in commanding the Seventh Infantry, A. E. F. He was born in Michigan 72 years ago.

Vincent Heads Lawyers Guild

Merle Vincent, member of the administrative staff of the wage-hour division and former president of the Colorado Bar Association, was elected president of the District Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild at a meeting last night in the old Interior Department Building.

Vice president for 1938-39 will be Gerard V. Reilly; secretary, Florence Dembitz, and treasurer, Charles MacPhee Wright. Members of the executive committee, in addition to the officers, are Felix Cohen, Thomas I. Emerson, Irving J. Leby, Philip Glick and Julius Schlezinger.

Plans were announced for a series of six lectures to begin at the end of this month. Speakers will include Jerome Frank, member of the SEC; Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, and Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury.

Two-Hour Halloween Parade Witnessed by 125,000 Here

a group of youngsters from the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club. To the delight of the spectators, they went into a football huddle and engaged in a brief but tumultuous scrimmage as their tribute to Her Majesty.

The National Capital Parks civic float followed soon after, consisting of a nodding bison in a yellow half moon.

The Community Center Department of the District public schools entered "a parade within a parade," depicting the celebration of Halloween throughout the years. The float that headed this section, brilliantly decorated in orange and black, showed bearded Father Time peering at the marchers behind through a tremendous telescope.

A group from the Improved Order of Red Men, Degree of Pocahontas—of whom Bill Coyle, master of ceremonies, said, "They're awful white-lookin' red men"—performed the moon dance of the early seventeenth century. A slightly discordant note was struck when one of the "red men" lighted a flare with a prosaic box of matches.

Following the whooping Indians came Colonial ladies and gentlemen and then groups from the nineteenth century, including a most spirited New York horse-car of the gay '90's.

Host of Children

Community Center children on roller skates, children dressed as tigers, decked out in blackface, accoutred in skeleton dress, children carrying clusters of rainbow-hued balloons, children of every size and age marched by in seemingly endless array. And they appeared to be just as entranced by the crowds along the route as the crowds were by them.

Taking part in this section were youngsters from Buchanan, McKinley-Langley, Thomson, East Washington, Anacostia, Maury, Woodrow Wilson, Jefferson, Roosevelt-Macfarland, Corcoran, Hayes, Hine, Powell, Cook, Central, and Bancroft centers, playgrounds and boys' and girls' clubs. One group that drew loud applause was the Jefferson Club in which the children were dressed as traffic lights.

And then came scores more from all the playgrounds: Palisades, Montrose Park, Twin Oaks, Edgewood, Langdon, Judiciary Square (dressed as farmers, waving corn stalks), Gallinger, Park View, Hamilton, Columbia, Sherwood, Rosedale, Georgetown (who performed their own unique version of the Lambeth Walk, marked by a combination of top hats and chewing gum), Mitchell Park, Takoma Park, Burroughs and Happy Hollow.

The section was ended with a handsome float showing Old King Cole and his fiddlers three. Following this royal group, something of an anticlimax occurred when a scarlet automobile, that sounded as though it were propelled by steam and looked as though it were built in 1900, jerked and sputtered down the avenue, piloted by two grinning youngsters. The crowd roared.

Away down Constitution avenue a tidal wave of screams and laughter indicated the approach of a zoo of grotesque animal-like balloons that weaved their way from side to side of the thoroughfare. Contributed by local department stores, the animals were guided by dozens of young men who bravely held them back from eating the spectators alive.

Monstrous alligators and cats, penguins and pigs and even genii arising out of bottles drew a sucession of "ohs" and "ahs" from the crowd.

Right behind the zoo marched an extremely diminutive young man with a sign, "Wrongway Corrigan." With him was an equally tiny girl, but she was not identified.

A junior drum and bugle corps from Gaithersburg, Md., a civic float from Edmonston, Md., and a huge terrapin from the University of Maryland were the paraders from beyond the District line.

Plea for High School

A float from Anacostia Junior-Senior High School attracted much attention with placards reading, "700 New Homes but No Provison for Students in Anacostia Senior-Junior High School," "We Want Seven More Rooms," "The School That Was Overcrowded Before Its Dedication."

A National Guard group carried the plea, "We Need a New Armory," and the District of Columbia Suffrage Association asked on its float, "Must We Grow Up Under a Dictatorship?"

Hundreds of spectators unable to find a place on the curb of Constitution avenue jammed the steps of government buildings along the route. Some were lucky enough to view the parade from upper floors. Others crowded such dangerous spots as the top of a narrow stone pillar at Fifteenth street, where 15 persons were huddled together.

Boy Scouts Help

The parade area was patrolled by 274 men under Major Brown and Assistant Superintendent L. I. H. Edwards. Capt. P. J. Carroll was in command of 78 park policemen. About 250 members of the District National Guard, under Col. Dayton G. Nevitt, were on duty, and over 70 Boy Scouts, directed by Rock M. Kirkham, assistant scout executive, served as messengers.

More than 500 extra police officers during the night and early today investigated more than 330 complaints, ranging from doorbell ringing, to an attempt to set fire to the Wheatley School. Fire engines answered half a dozen false alarms.

Arnell Detwiler, colored, 31, 116 Francis street southeast, was charged at the Fifth Precinct with discharging firearms after, police said, he fired a shotgun at a group of boys.

A mysterious locksmith entered police headquarters building and tricked the police by putting new locks on doors. Lacking keys to fit the new locks, detectives boosted a reporter through a transom to get their topcoats.

Police agreed that the post-parade crowd which jammed downtown F street from Fifteenth to Ninth was the biggest of the year—even greater than the New Year throngs.

Nazis Retire Generals Who Feared Allies

Nazi

juvenated armed forces, was said to have become increasingly in conflict with his Fuehrer in the efforts of Britain's Lord Runciman to mediate the Czechoslovak-Sudetenland dispute.

Informed sources said when it became clear that Hitler was determined to risk armed force to "liberate" Sudetenland, Gen. Beck felt he could not take the rsponsibility of mapping military plans for a Germany he considered inadequately prepared to meet a combined allied force.

About that time Gen. Beck was sent on a "special mission" to the Western front—across the country from Czechoslovakia—to inspect Germany's Siegfried line on the Rhine facing France's Maginot line.

Both Overestimated Allies

He continued to hold the title of chief of the general staff, but Halder already was in active charge.

Because of the crisis at that time, Hitler was said to have felt it unwise to have any army shakeup.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Heinrich Himmler, head of all Germany's police forces, and others who urged Hitler to remain firm with reference to Czechoslovakia won the day, however, and Germany gained more than even the most optimistic expected.

Gen. Beck, as a disciplined soldier, realized he had underestimated German will to conquest and had overestimated the will of Britain and France to prevent further spread of German influence.

He chose retirement as did Rundstedt, apparently for much the same reason.

Visiting Nurses' Work Explained In Chest Drive

Work of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society was explained yesterday to visitors who called at the organization's headquarters in the Albee Building as part of the Community Chest "go and see" campaign.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president of the society, and eight members of the board served with Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, the executive director, as hostesses.

During the past year the nurses made a total of 167,972 visits and cared for 25,601 patients. Marcella Fay, educational director, demonstrated the manner in which the 66 nurses of the organization pack their bag.

Members of the board who helped receive and rolled bandages during the slack moments, were: Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mrs. J. Lawrecne Kauffmann, Mrs. J. Lawrence Mrs. Charles F. Wilson, Mrs. William Marbury, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. J. W. Turrentine and Mrs. Marvin Wright.

Conference Calls For Peace, Boycott

A call for united democratic action for peace was sounded at a conference held last night at Wesley Hall under the sponsorship of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy, the Washington Committee for Aid to China and the Washington branch of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

Attended by representatives of church groups, trade unions and liberal organizations the conference outlined a program which will be the keynote of an Armistice Day mass meeting Thursday evening, November 10, at the Masonic Auditorium.

The mass meeting will ask for legislation prohibiting the shipment of war materials and the extension of credits to aggressor nations and will urge a boycott against the goods of Germany, Italy and Japan.

Dies Charges Reds and Cabinet Try to 'Discredit' His Inquiry

Dies

vestigation, a "torrent of abuse" was loosed against his group.

"No longer do the Communists and their sympathizers sneer," he said. "We have probed too deeply to evoke smiles. No, we see pained expressions of uncontrollable anger. There is no precedent in history for this torrent of abuse.

"Here we are struggling desperately under almost inconceivable handicaps, without lawyers and only three investigators to perform one of the most difficult and important tasks ever assigned to a committee."

The resolution authorizing the investigation called upon the Federal Departments, he said, to supply the committee with stenographers, investigators, lawyers and other help.

Says Arnold Refused

Nevertheless, he said, the Justice Department, through Acting Attorney General Arnold, informed him that "circumstances prevented" it from helping the committee. An appeal for assistance to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, also failed, he said.

Thereupon, he continued, he wrote to President Roosevelt asking that WPA place the names of 12 suggested investigators upon its payroll. A month later the President transmitted to him a letter from Harry Hopkins declining to do so, he said, although Hopkins "admitted" that this had been done for the La Follette committee.

Meanwhile, Dies said, the secretary of the La Follette committee called him and said he could obtain departmental assistance for him. He sent two men to him, one of whom was a WPA man, he said, and the other was "on the payroll of the Justice Department or the La Follette committee."

Needless to say," Dies continued, "we did not accept this Greek gift because we had good reasons to believe that these two men were assigned to the committee to sabotage our investigation."

Charges "Ridicule"

After the Administration had declined to help the committee, Dies said, "the next move was to attempt to discredit the committee by ridicule and misrepresentation." Such a campaign was begun, he continued, "by certain radical writers whose sympathies for Soviet Russia are common knowledge in Washington."

He added:

"Immediately and as if by prearrangement, Secretary Perkins and Secretary Ickes took prominent parts in this campaign by the repetition of a crude and ridiculous distortion of the testimony of one of the numerous witnesses who appeared before us."

Referring to President Roosevelt's charge that the Dies committee was employing un-American tactics, Dies said:

"Unless he had been misinformed, I cannot believe that the leader of my party and the President of my country would use the great prestige of his high office to attempt to crush a Democratic committee which is desperately struggling against every conceivable odds to render an unselfish and patriotic service to our beloved country.

"If the President is displeased, why haven't he or his departmental heads furnished us with investigators, lawyers and clerical assistance?"

Dies declared that although he was a loyal Democrat "there are some things that I place above partisanship and political expediency; there are some things that are more priceless to me than the office of Congressman, or the approving smiles and blessings of the most powerful Administration in history."

"Among these things are the preservation of Americanism and the protection of this country against the infiltration of alien influence and philosophies which threaten to undermine the pillars of the republic.

"We must," he said, "expose not only the Communists, but those who think they are cleverly using the Communists for political advantage, when, as a matter of fact, the Communists are using them to disseminate the Marxian doctrines of atheism and class hatred."

Dies Called 'Gullible'

Anderson said of Dies that "perhaps the most imposing thing about the Congressman is his magnificent gullibility." He said that in 15 years as a Washington correspondent he had "seen Congressional investigations that were slip-shod . . . some that were shockingly unfair."

"But so help me, I have never seen one that approached the Dies committee's performance in either of these respects. As a matter of fact, I have never seen a Congressional investigation that resembled this one at all."

He turned to testimony which accused Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan of "treason" in not following a firmer course toward the sit-down strikers of the automobile plants in early 1937.

Sees Effort to Beat Murphy

"For more than three days the committee pumped testimony into the record—and what from the committee's standpoint is infinitely more important—into the newspapers, all calculated to establish a general impression that the Automobile Workers Union was dominated by Communists and that the sitdown strikes were engineered and directed by Communists.

"Then, as a carefully planned climax, the committee called to the stand a Republican judge and a discharged Republican city manager—both bitter political enemies of Gov. Murphy—and permitted them to testify that the Governor had condoned the strikes, precipitating a break-down of civil authority in Michigan, brought the courts into disrepute, and generally played into the hands of the Communists. Bang! The committee had its climax.

"I don't think anyone who studied this performance could escape the impression that it was deliberately staged and that its purpose was to defeat Gov. Murphy when he comes up for re-election next week."

Earlier, Dies disclosed that a $335,000 bridge project at Port Arthur, Tex., in his district, was rescinded on October 25. He broadly and unmistakably intimated that he believed this action was taken in retaliation for the committee's activities.

It was on the same day, it was recalled, that President Roosevelt rebuked the committee for what he called an "un-American attack" to influence an election by receiving testimony that Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan was guilty of treason for his handling of sit-down strikes in automobile factories in early 1937.

Bride of 10, Mother Jailed; Groom Sought

Kentucky Area Combed
Child Denies Marriage
Eight Live in One Room

By the Associated Press.

Prestonsburg, Ky., Oct. 31.—Child Bride Rosie Columbus Tackett and her mother were jailed here today on warrants growing out of the girl's week-old marriage to a 34-year-old mountain country coal miner.

But the husband, Fleming Tackett, still was hunted by Floyd County sheriff's deputies.

Deputy Tom James said the girl—shown by county medical records to be 10 years old—was taken into custody with her mother at their former home on Barnett's Creek in adjacent Johnson County.

Warrants Allege Rape

The warrants were issued here by County Judge Edwin P. Hill. One charged the girl's husband with rape. Another charged the mother, Mrs. Grace Columbus, with conspiring with Tackett "in the crime of rape upon the person of Rosie Columbus." The third warrant charged Rosie with being a delinquent child growing up in "idleness and crime."

Mrs. Columbus told officers she didn't know where "Flem" was. Rosie shook her head at questioners.

"I'm not married, I'm not married," Rosie called out. "My old man ran off and left me."

The girl bride's 200-pound mother, on the 20-mile automobile trip to Prestonburg, told officers Rosie had been so "took" with Tackett that she attempted to kill herself shortly before Mrs. Columbus came to the courthouse here and took out a marriage license for the couple.

This "Quick-Dissolving" Property of Genuine BAYER Aspirin Explains Why It Goes to Work so Fast—Try This Way

EVERYONE who takes aspirin should study the pictures above.

They tell you clearly why thousands always insist on getting genuine BAYER Aspirin when they seek fast relief from the pains of neuritis, neuralgia, rheumatism or headache.

Your own eyes can see how genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets begin to dissolve almost instantly they touch moisture. Drop a genuine BAYER Aspirin tablet in a glass of water. Watch it start to disintegrate and dissolve often before it touches bottom.

Thus—because they disintegrate almost instantly, BAYER Aspirin tablets are ready to go to work promptly to bring relief from pain.

If you suffer from headache or other common pain — rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia — keep in mind this "quick-disintegrating, quick-relieving" property of Bayer Aspirin. Especially if you want relief in a hurry.

For the way a Bayer Aspirin tablet works in a glass of water is the way it works when you take it.

It starts to dissolve at once, hence is ready to "take hold" of the average pain or headache within a few minutes.

When you buy, always ask for it by its full name "Bayer Aspirin"—not by the name "aspirin" alone.

See that the name BAYER is clearly stamped in the form of a cross on every tablet you take. Then you'll know you're getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin millions use for quick relief.

SEE YOUR DOCTOR if you have frequent headaches. Often the cause can be found and corrected.

Governor's Wife Christens Locomotive

Seaboard Buys Diesel Southern Runs Cut Mrs. Cone in Ceremony

The deep South was brought a step nearer the industrial areas of the North and East yesterday as the first of three groups of giant Diesel-electric locomotives, most powerful and longest in the world, was christened at Union Station.

Mrs. Fred P. Cone, wife of the Governor of Florida, hurled a bottle of water from Biscayne Bay against the sleek green and orange nose of the 210-foot engine and christened it the "Orange Blossom Special."

More than 500 persons attended the ceremony.

The new 6,000 horsepower locomotive will be used by the Seaboard Railway and is the first "streamliner" in the Southeast.

Pays Tribute to South

Receiving the locomotive from H. L. Hamilton, president of the Electro-Motive Corporation, its builders, were L. B. Powell, jr., and Col. Henry W. Anderson, receivers of the Seaboard.

"To carry on these improvements in the face of existing conditions required both faith and courage," Col. Anderson said, referring to development of the new engine. "The Seaboard pays tribute to the South and evidences its faith in that great region. It is serving the present and building for the future."

Charles F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors Corporation, who designed the engine; R. K. Evans, vice president of General Motors Corporation, in charge of Diesel development, and several officials of the Seaboard and Electro-Motive Corporation took part in the dedication ceremonies.

Eight More Scheduled

The engine weighs 900,000 pounds and comprises three 2,000-horsepower units coupled together. It operates from a single control station which resembles an airliner's cockpit. The operator has complete control of the train by use of only three levers.

Officials of the railroad, the Electro-Motive Corporation and General Motors Corporation and prominent Washingtonians pulled out of Union Station on the new streamliner yesterday at 3:30 p. m., on a trial run after a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

Nine of the new Diesel-electric engines will be put in operation, beginning December 12. They are expected to cut several hours from existing schedules between New York and south Florida.

Mrs. R. A. d'Anson Dies at Age of 51

Rowena Holmes d'Anson, 51, prominent in Washington and Maryland D. A. R. activities, died yesterday at her home, 1334 Quincy street northwest, after a year's illness.

Mrs. d'Anson was regent of the Maj. William Thomas Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of St. Marys County, Md.

Surviving Mrs. d'Anson are her husband, Robert Armistead d'Anson, and two children, Nannie Armistead d'Anson and Robert Locke d'Anson. She also leaves a sister and three brothers.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the Transfiguration Church, Fourteenth and Gallitan streets. Burial will be at All Faith Church, St. Marys County, at 2 o'clock.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Opera Company of New York presents "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" in the Belasco Theater Monday night, under the direction of Otto Lehmann. The casts:

Cavalleria Rusticana

Santuzza ..... Viola Philo
Turiddu ..... Patrick Henry
Alfio ..... Anthony Meli
Lola ..... Josephine Fusco
Lucia ..... Rose d'Amato

Pagliacci

Nedda ..... Ruth Altmann
Canio ..... John Chickering
Tonio ..... Alfredo Chigi
Silvio ..... Randolph Crowe
Beppo ..... Bernard Poland

Opening a week's engagement in the Belasco Theater last evening, the National Opera Company of New York presented those nearly inseparable twins of realistic drama, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." One asset of the organization is the small but well-trained and willing chorus, which could always be relied upon for vigorous and accurate singing. In fact, it was the chorus which frequently set the pace for the orchestra, which was inclined to lag despite the urgings of the conductor, Otto Lehmann.

Viola Philo easily carried off the honors in Mascagni's impassioned setting of the Sicilian story by Giovanni Verga. Her characterization of Santuzza was dramatically vital and emotionally tense, and there was no histrionic exaggeration in her portrayal. Her voice, firm and vibrant, was in constant control by good technique, and the entire register of tone had an even smoothness.

Patrick Henry as the faithless Turiddu acted was a vehemance which effected the quality of his singing. The natural lyricism of his voice was often strained into harshness, and by the time he reached the "Brindisi" the clarity of tone has tarnished. But the weakness in his singing had its compensation in the fire of his emotions.

Anthony Meli impersonated Alfio with commendable acuteness in character drawing, and his sturdy barytone voice served him well. The pert Lola of Josephine Fusco was fully in the tradition of the part, saucy as to demeanor and pleasing in voice. Rose d'Amato adequately filled the ungrateful role of Mama Lucia.

In the prologue to "Pagliacci," Alfredo Chigi showed that his singing is still on the upward road. The ringing sonority of his voice and its sustained steadiness in fortissimo were excellent. Back in the role of the deformed and half-witted Tonio, he gave a sinister and powerful reading.

Ruth Altmann was a very personable and charming Nedda with a voice which gave to the "Ballatta" its full value of lyric soaring. The lower register, however, lacked resonance on several occasions. The Silvio of the cast was not Anthony Meli, as the program had it, but Randolph Crowe, who sang his major scene with suavity of tone and easy production. John Chickering was a disappointing Canio, for his voice had neither the firmness nor the plangent timber essential to the part.

Funeral Set Tomorrow For Mrs. L. L. Green

Mrs. Eloise Baker Green, 74, lifelong resident of Montgomery County, Md., and Washington, died yesterday at her home, 3530 Edmunds street northwest, after a long illness.

Funeral services will be held at the W. R. Pumphrey chapel, 7005 Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery. Mrs. Green is survived by her husband, Leighton L. Green, retired farmer and real estate dealer.

Mrs. Judge Dies At 67; Leader In Aid to Girls

Opened Catholic Home Senate Praised Work Formerly Chicagoan

Mrs. Catherine Gordon Judge, 67, of 4320 Fourty-fourth street northwest, prominently associated with Catholic charities here and in Chicago the last 30 years, died yesterday in Garfield Hospital.

Requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Anne's Church at 9 a.m. tomorrow. Burial is to be in Chicago.

A native of County Fermanagh, Ireland, Mrs. Judge came to this country as a girl of 13, settling with her family in Chicago. She became president of the Catholic Benevolent Association there before moving to Washington in 1918.

Here she opened a home for Catholic working girls at 1205 K street northwest, and when the program of the home was absorbed into the Catholic Community House Mrs. Green was appointed manager of the new institution. In that position she often supervised preparation of meals for as many as 900 persons a day and guided around the building tourists who came to see a program gaining national reputation. A Senate committee investigating housing in the Capital paid formal tribute to her efforts to improve conditions of Catholic girls.

She attended the Eucharistic Congress in Bublin in 1932 and in Budapest this year.

She leaves three sons, Frank, John and Joseph Green, all of this city, and three daughters, Mary and Florence Green, of Washington, and Mrs. Catherine Bunker, of Los Angeles. Her husband, Frank Green, a contractor, died in 1900.

Murray Forfeits Bond in Speeding

Charles Murray, about 30, of the Shoreham Hotel, the son of Senator James E. Murray, of Montana, forfeited collateral of $11.45 when he was to have appeared in Riverdale, Md., court yesterday on a charge of exceeding 45 miles per hour in an automobile.

Murray was arrested October 9 in College Park and charged at that time with exceeding 60 miles per hour. The case coming up originally on October 10 was continued until yesterday by Judge Fred C. Lutz who lowered the charge from exceeding 60 to exceeding 45 miles per hour on the recommendation of the arresting officer, Maryland State Policeman James Miller.

D. C. Rate Expert Dies at Raleigh

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 31 (AP).—Charles M. Young, 60, of Washington, D. C., rate specialist with the Interstate Commerce Commission, died en route to a hospital today after collapsing in the Federal Building here, where he was waiting to testify in a court case.

Originally from Athens, Ga., Young had been connected with the I. C. C. since 1914.

The body will be taken to Bairdstown, Ga.

Rites Tomorrow For Miss Warfield, Kin of Duchess

Services will be held tomorrow for Virginia Frances Warfield, 24, student at Corcoran Art Gallery and distant relative of the Duchess of Windsor.

Miss Warfield died Sunday at Columbia Hospital following an operation. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Warfield, of 211 Rhode Island avenue northeast, Miss Warfield was a great grandniece of Gov. Warfield of Maryland. She was a graduate of McKinley High School and a member of Lambda Sigma Delta. A brother, William, also survives.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest, with burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Marion A. Harper, Member of Old D. C. Family, Dies

Requiem Mass for Miss Marion A. Harper, who was born within sight of the Capitol a year before the Civil War, will be sung at Nativity Church at 9 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Miss Harper died Sunday at her residence, 121 Gallatin street northwest, after an illness of two years. She retired in 1926 after 49 years service in the Government Printing Office.

With her older brother, William Harper, who survives her, she often recalled early days in the District.

Her father, she remembered, had been suspected of connection with earlier conspiracies against the President's life and after he built the platform for Lincoln's inauguration was obliged to stand on it near the President as proof of the honesty of his workmanship.

Miss Harper was a member of the Sodality of Nativity Church and the Auxiliary of St. John. Besides her brother William, she leaves another brother, John Harper, and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Nalley, all of Washington.

Downey Needed In Senate, Farley Tells Conference

Sheridan Downey, advocate of the $30-every-Thursday pension plan in California, is needed in the Senate to fight reaction, National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley said last night in a long-distance campaign address from New York to California.

The Postmaster General also forecast election of Culbert Olson, Democratic nominee for Governor, although "to be sure our political foes call him a radical." He cautioned the Democrats not to let "this absurd name-calling worry you. In the minds—or rather in the propaganda—of the minority party we are all anarchists. President Roosevelt heads that list."

He said that "everything is coming our way," including reviving business.

Child Helped Kill 'Witch,' Father Says

Suspect Involves Wife Daughter Testifies Poker, Flatiron Used

By the Associated Press.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 31.—Wilfred Pitchette, 35-year-old WPA laborer, accused of the "witchcraft" slaying of 20-year-old Marian Doyle, testified at his court examination today that he and his wife beat Miss Doyle to death with a flatiron and poker on the night of October 22.

He also said he "thought" his 7-year-old daughter, Norma, assisted in the slaying, but Mrs. Pichette asserted the child "had nothing to do with it."

Norma, testifying against her parent for the second time within a week, disclosed her father forced Miss Doyle, Mrs. Pichette and herself to kneel on the floor, with upraised hands, at their home just prior to the killing.

'Your Fault,' Suicide's Note Tells Man Friend

New York, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—The body of Vesta Fraleigh, 26, of 45 Fayette street, Cambridge, Mass., was claimed at the morgue today by Mrs. Lillian Austin.

Miss Fraleigh committed suicide yesterday by inhaling gas in a furnished room. She left two notes, one addressed to her mother and asking forgiveness, the other to a man identified as "Bill," which said, "It is all your fault."

Embassy Picketing

It is strange that the constitutionality of the resolution forbidding hostile demonstrations in the vicinity of foreign embassies was ever questioned. Since the issue was raised, however, it is well that the United States Court of Appeals for the District has given a positive and emphatic reply.

The Government would indeed be in a sorry plight if it were denied the power to protect from insults and humiliation the representatives of other nations stationed at Washington. So long as the United States maintains friendly relations with other powers it has a solemn obligation to shield their emissaries in this country from such harassment in their own headquarters. The court found the regulations adopted for this purpose to be "reasonable and proper." It is difficult to see how any judge or any student of American government could have reached any other conclusion.

Claims that the ban upon picketing of embassies, legations and consulates violates the rights of freedom of speech and assemblage are entirely fantastic. Neither of those rights includes the prerogative of molesting foreign envoys or of disregarding police regulations for their protection. That fact was evident when the indefensible practice of picketing embassies began. Certainly now it has been established beyond question.

Once and for all the court's decision should end a form of demonstration which has no effect whatever upon the policies of foreign governments and succeeds only in embarrassing our own Department of State.

Bulgaria's Claims

Bulgaria has chosen the psychological moment to press her claims for territory lost in the World War.

In view of the Munich parley and its aftermath, the question of boundary revision in Central Europe and the Balkans has clearly emerged from the realm of the academic. Czechoslovakia's cession of territory to Germany, Poland and Hungary has created the possibility of other frontier modifications for the benefit of the dissatisfied states. Of this possibility Bulgaria is now taking full advantage.

Regions that once were Bulgar are now in possession of Rumania, Yugoslavia and Greece, partners with Turkey in the Balkan Entente. The combination is a formidable one and would seem to make Bulgaria's case for revision hopeless. It is obvious that she cannot employ against her neighbors the method successfully employed by Germany in Czechoslovakia. Bulgaria, at the present time, is no military match for any of her neighbors, let alone all of them. That is why the Bulgar spokesman who raised the question of frontier revision on behalf of the Sofia government also hastened to point out that Bulgaria's claims embody no threat of armed force. "We want a peaceful revision of the peace treaty," he said.

Despite her military weakness, however, one factor operates in Bulgaria's favor. With Germany now astride the corridor leading from the Danube to the Aegean, German domination of the entire Balkan peninsula becomes a certainty unless the nations in that area unite in defense of their independence. The Balkan Entente which came into being some years ago can be used for that purpose. But the combination is incomplete unless and until Bulgaria joins it.

Despite her desire to live on terms of peace with all her neighbors, a desire manifested in the Yugoslav-Bulgarian treaty of perpetual friendship of January 24, 1937, Bulgaria has thus far kept aloof from the Balkan Entente because of her unwillingness to accept as permanent the present territorial arrangement in southeastern Europe. Claiming the Dobrudja region which is now in the hands of Rumania, the Macedonian territory she lost to Yugoslavia and Eastern Thrace which forms part of the Greek kingdom, she insists that the return of some if not necessarily all of these regions must be the prelude to any arrangement whereby Bulgaria would be included in a comprehensive system of peace in the Balkans.

And if this demand is turned down, there is the possibility, which the governments at Bucharest, Belgrade and Athens cannot discount, that Bulgaria will make common cause with Berlin and allow herself to be used as the spearpoint of Nazi political penetration into the Balkans.

Great American Jitters

Wonderful, indeed, is the power of illusion. It is said, for instance, of the great soldier Crillon that he was once so moved by a sermon on the Passion that he rushed to the pulpit in tears and with drawn sword, crying, "Where were you then, Crillon? Where were you then?"

There is also the legend of the royal sculptor, Pygmalion, who after carving from ivory a nymph of marvelous beauty, fell in love with his own statuette. In many of the frontier opera houses of the 'sixties and 'seventies there was a standing rule about parking shooting irons at the box office, lest the rough and simple audiences of that day be inspired to a premature rescue of the heroine.

None of these and other precedents, however, need detract from the amazing artistic achievement of young Mr. Orson Welles and his Mercury Theater troupe in their radio dramatization on Sunday night. Whether, like the player in Hamlet who turned pale at his own lines about the "mobled queen," Mr. Welles and his friends managed to scare themselves as well as their Nation-wide audience, will never be known, nor is it particularly important. The measure of their success is in the fact that the old Broadway cliches were abruptly transformed from vulgar hyperbole into polite understatements. Mr. Welles certainly did "panic 'em;" he did more than send them "rolling in the aisles;" he had them rolling out of their homes in mad flight from a terror that none of them comprehended and few of them could even name.

It is pretty obvious that young Mr. Welles in shifting the events of old Mr. Wells' pseudo-scientific fantasy from England to New Jersey had nothing more sinister in mind than to point up a yarn that, after 30-odd years, must have seemed worn out old hat.

All the same, the thing is far from being a joke; it comes pretty close to being a national tragedy. It has revealed to us things about ourselves it might be better not to know. It has proved that men and women sitting comfortably by their firesides are quite as susceptible to unreasoning panic as men caught in surges of mob emotion. It has proved that there are forms of fear against which mere common sense is apparently powerless. And it shows pretty plainly the state to which our national nerve has been reduced.

In the throes of their jitters thousands of presumably intelligent Americans were unable to summon the seemingly obvious second thought that any invasion catastrophic enough to destroy all human life and property along the Eastern Seaboard would automatically have put an end to the broadcast to which they were listening. In New Jersey where, naturally enough, the panic seems to have been greatest, apparently nobody thought to find reassurance in the fact that both outside and inside the lights burned bright as ever, that the very telephones on which they were frantically calling the police were still working.

Few seem to have tried the still easier experiment of flicking the dial an inch to the right or left. If they had, the strains of "Flat Foot Floogie" or "A Tisket, A Tasket" would have given the comforting knowledge that, for the moment at least, all was well with these United States.

From the whole business certain lessons seem to emerge pretty plainly. One is that the dread pervading so much of modern life can be crystallized quickly into hysteria. Another is the fact, which you can be sure has been noted in unfriendly quarters, that Americans are as easily scared out of their wits as Europeans by the mere thought of invasion from the air. The third is the ease and rapidity with which the radio could be transformed into an instrument of national demoralization. Once again, Man has made for himself a toy that may prove very dangerous if not properly handled.

A New Approach

An expansion plan involving definite commitments on the part of certain large private utilities to place orders for equipment in "strategic" centers has been announced by the National Defense Committee. News of this latest rapprochement between the Government and the utilities will naturally be received with a certain amount of skepticism in view of the fact that earlier hopes of a truce to hostilities have been repeatedly disappointed. However, the present program is a most promising outcome of conferences between public officials and utility executives which appear to have been carried on in a spirit of friendly cooperation.

A new and significant stress is being laid upon the need for an up-to-date, fully equipped power industry as a defense measure in case of war. Conditional offers of Government aid in financing electric power expansion for such purposes give some assurance that the private utilities will be better safeguarded in the future against unfair competition from Government subsidized power projects.

Estimates of the amount of new financing in prospect are highly divergent, ranging from small sums representing minimum unavoidable outlays to very large figures. The nature of the predictions of course depends upon the importance which heads of harassed utilities attach to this latest display of official friendliness. Undoubtedly, if private utilities and investors felt confident that lasting and effective co-operation had been established between the Government and the power industry, the utilities would have little difficulty in financing a long delayed expansion program without calling upon the Government for aid.

Attempts to propitiate business in advance of a general election by announcing plans for placing large orders with equipment makers and for freeing the capital markets from inhibitions imposed by Government threats of subsidized competition will inevitably be viewed with suspicion by cynics and partisan critics of the Administration. From that viewpoint the timing of the statement released by the national defense power committee is poor. Nevertheless, it would be a mistake to underrate its potential importance, especially in view of the optimistic statements issued by executive heads of large companies.

C. E. Groesbeck, of the Electric Bond & Share Co., for example, hopes the program will "be the means of reopening to the utilities the capital markets, particularly for equity financing which is badly needed . . ." If that hope is realized, the projected preparations for defense would in this instance prove to be a very constructive peacetime achievement.

The District Budget

So far as operation of the local government is concerned, the budget prepared by the District Commissioners for the fiscal year 1940 appears to be reasonably satisfactory. To a considerable extent, however, that hopeful aspect of the budget is offset by the continued neglect of urgent public improvements.

Three courses were open to the Commissioners. They could have approved a budget that would have amply supplied the civic needs of the District, which would have necessitated a drastic increase in taxes. They could have restricted their estimates and placed chief emphasis on capital improvements. Or, holding to the aim of economy, they could enhance the local government's operating efficiency at the expense of public works.

If the necessity of restricting the 1940 budget to a slight increase over this year's appropriations be conceded, there will then be little question as to the wisdom of the decision which the Commissioners made. Community improvements can always be postponed in case of emergency. Urgent needs such as police protection and public health cannot. With limited funds available, immediate demands for essential community service must be given prior consideration.

Expenditures planned for 1940 exceed the current budget by only $622,884. Yet the Commissioners have allowed substantial increases for the schools, including an addition of $281,904 to teachers' salaries, for the police, for the Health Department and for public welfare activities. They propose to end the outrageous 70-hour week imposed upon some District employes. The standard work week would be fixed at 44 hours through employment of larger staffs at the reformatory, jail, District hospitals and similar institutions. Inequities resulting from the denial of promotions on efficiency ratings would also be corrected.

Considering the modest total of the budget, these desirable increases represent a real achievement. However, no citizen should ignore the fact that the District is still on a subsistence basis—that urgent capital improvements are accumulating at a rate which indicates future difficulties.

Budget Officer Donovan points out that capital outlays from the general fund have been "diminishing in order to provide additional money to meet the constant increase in the cost of operation and maintenance of the municipal government." From 1925 to 1933 Congress appropriated an average of $9,000,000 per year for public improvements, including schools. During the last six fiscal years appropriations for this purpose have been a fraction of that amount. The 1940 budget calls for capital outlays of only $3,500,000.

It is doubtful economy to continue this practice when new schools, health centers, administrative buildings, a new central library and various other improvements are urgently needed. Projects of this sort cannot be indefinitely postponed without serious impairment of community service. Moreover, there is sound argument for maintenance of at least a normal program of public works when unemployment is widespread.

Civic organizations made effective pleas for economy before the Commissioners. Certainly no taxes now levied ought to be increased. But the tax burden in Washington is onerous chiefly because it is so poorly distributed. Too large a percentage of the total revenue is collected from homeowners. If the current study of new sources of revenue results in the adoption of a modern tax system for the District, there should be no difficulty in financing a reasonable program of necessary public improvements. Particularly will that be so if Congress can be induced to recognize its own obligations to the Nation's Capital while it is devising new taxes on local residents.

Union Of Democracies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a recent conference of Associated Industries of Massachusetts former Ambassador to Germany William E. Dodd suggests that the democracies, Great Britain, France and the United States, unite in the interests of peace. Others, too, have made this suggestion.

Britain and France have long looked to the United States for cooperation, and even leadership, in international affairs. Our traditional policy of isolation has impeded their efforts.

The recent crisis and war scare in Czechoslovakia caused much concern over here. It proved that the American public does not believe that our isolationalist policy will keep us out of war.

Mr. Dodd declares that a union of democracies for peace could prevent violation of treaties, aggression and war by a threat of boycott. Such a powerful instrument used by three major nations would seriously cripple any aggressor. This would prove a more effective war preventive than the strongest navy, which would only add keenness to the armament race.

War And Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Wantmore Truth," who writes in The Post of October 28, seems to have lingered overlong at the feet of Vittorio Mussolini, or, maybe (hardy soul!), he has read "Mein Kampf," and his tongue is still thick. But assuming that his choice of a pen name reveals a sincere desire, I would like to intrude a little statistical fact into the Aryanesque webbery of his romanticisms.

Humanity's gain from war, as revealed by the available statistics on the subject is not a burnishing of that "golden lamp of love," heroes are not "forged with the hammer of Thor." The cold brutal fact remains —civilization's only reward for the "blood offering" is to be returned, stunted physically (the last war cost Europe 2 inches in the stature of its male population), mentally and spiritually, to a wasteland.

Pedestrians And Traffic Control

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several years ago in Los Angeles I stepped off a downtown curb and into a heavy stream of traffic against a red light. I had taken but very few steps—or hops—when my attention was caught by a familiar mass demonstration that I had heard many times at Griffith Park after either umpire or player had made what the spectators regarded as a bad error.

I was being booed!

That was my last public appearance as a jay-walker. I shall never forget the mortification I experienced at the moment. And that is why pedestrian regulation is a success on the Pacific Coast.

True, they have laws against jay-walking and the police enforce them to the best of their ability. But the success of the regulation is due more to the fact that jay-walkers are "policed" by their fellow pedestrians than by the cops.

Los Angeles folk have come to view smooth-working traffic as rather a sporting proposition. Motorists and pedestrians alike give way to the other when it is their turn to go on the green light; and they boo unmercifully the fellow who doesn't play the game.

A good many years ago I went especially to New York City to watch the inauguration of attempted pedestrian regulation on Fifth avenue. With the late Dr. John Harriss, father of the traffic lights and towers, I watched and agreed that there was no hope for such if in the hands of the police alone.

The Los Angeles plan of booing yokels, indifferent and plain onery street users made pedestrian regulation a success in that city. Maybe it would work in Washington.

WILLIAM ULLMAN.
Washington, Oct 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proposed pedestrian control law is in line with the trend of the times, i. e., that all initiative, all self-reliance, all independent thinking should be taken away from the individual and reposed exclusively in the hands of bureaucrats who will do his thinking for him.

I maintain that I know better when is the safest time and where is the safest place for me to cross the street, under the circumstances then existing, than does some absentee traffic expert operating by remote control. There are many times when it is far safer to cross in the middle of the block than it is at the crossing, where one must watch not only for through traffic but for cars turning right and left, and many times it is impossible to cross on the green light due to the right and left turners.

As to the need for such a law, I recall that a member of the House District Committee last winter observed that very few traffic accidents occur in the down-town section, due to the fact that there traffic is so congested that it is impossible for people to drive fast. If anybody knows how many pedestrians have been run down by automobiles in the down-town section of Washington in the last year, the facts should be stated.

The proposed law ought to be called "The Herd Law," because it proposes to make dumb, driven cattle out of the people. It would work fine in Russia and Germany,

HOWARD B. SMITH.
Washington, Oct. 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer has been much interested in the furore about the control of pedestrian traffic in the District of Columbia, as it does not appear that there are any efforts made to control motor traffic. My observations of traffic operations extend to many States and I have never seen any place where there is as utter disregard for traffic regulations as these is in the District.

Forty to sixty miles an hour seems to be the regular speed of motorists on the streets, and motorists seem imbued with the idea that unless they swing round corners at 40 miles an hour, they are not doing the proper thing. Entering street intersections against red lights and crossing street intersections on red lights seems to be the regular order. It is also apparent that the cars in use in the District of Columbia are not equipped with brakes or if they are, apparently the drivers do not know it.

Apparently pedestrians do not have any rights in the District. If there are any traffic laws in the District, it would be well to enforce a few of them as regards speeding, running red lights, making turns into pedestrian traffic at high speeds, and then go after the pedestrians. As it stands, by the process of evolution, the pedestrians who are on the continual jump for their lives, will, in the course of a few generations "evolute" into a cross between a human being and a kangaroo.

On Being Consistent

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Secretary Hull has just issued a stinging rebuke to Japan because of alleged economic discrimination against American Nationals. While inditing this rebuke the Secretary surely must have had in mind the discriminatory actions of this country against Japanese citizens. When the Japanese delegation proposed race equality as the basic principle of the League of Nations, the United States' representatives joined in rejecting the proposal. Naturally enough, this wounded the pride of this proud nation.

The State of California enacted sharp discriminatory laws restricting Japanese ownership and use of land and at the same time denying them the benefit of the immigration quota and segregating their children in the public schools. Other Western States with a sizable Japanese contingent followed the lead of California. These restrictions were sharply discriminatory against the Japanese nationals, as they were not imposed upon the nationals of any European country. Japan, by virtue of her civilized status, felt that she was entitled to all the rights, privileges and prerogatives of other nations. Such distinctions inevitably wound the pride of a sensitive people.

President Wilson sent to California his then Secretary of State, William Jennings Bryan, to assuage their ruffled sensibilities and appease their grievances. A compromise was struck but the source of Japan's complaint still remains.

While it may seem like comparing things which are dissimilar to balance outraged human feelings against economic considerations, yet consistency is a jewel in international as in personal relations. The old legal maxim, "He who would seek equity must do equity," has universal application.

Vocational Education

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Assistant Secretary of War, Hon. Louis Johnson, in calling attention to "the impending shortage of skilled labor that threatens to impede mobilization of America for national defense in an emergency," puts the finger on one of the sore spots in our economic system. Owing to the long period of unemployment we have now a far less number of skilled mechanics than formerly.

Our Nation is weak in trade schools, or in training for industrial occupations and (thanks to the trade unions), in an apprentice system. The George-Drew act of 1936 and the former Smith-Hughes act of 1917 are attempts in the right direction, but thus far the necessity for vocational education has not been sufficiently recognized by the leaders in education and by the public. In many cases the compliance with this act has been only the minimum required to secure the available Federal funds. Our educators have neither been trained nor had the experience to cope with the problems of industrial education. In many cases teachers of vocational education have had some technical training, but lack the practical experience necessary to educate artisans who can be a success in industry.

The program of national armament will take years to perfect, and hysteria cannot effect it. Teachers, who have had the necessary technical training, should be placed in industry where they can secure the required experience and knowledge of modern manufacturing methods.

Industrial education should be cooperative, i. e., the students should alternate during their school course in school and industry so that when they complete their course they will have both the knowledge and experience to be of value in modern industry.

Old Men Love the Sun

WITH ME the saying that old men love the sun used to be a phrase of vague and general meaning; now it is a truth of approved and personal application. For now that I am old I, too, love to sit in the sun.

And in these Indian Summer days when the alchemy of Nature has turned the green of the trees into amethyst and ruby and gold, with the warm autumnal sun giving the earth its farewell benediction before the dun days of winter, with the young bachelor mockingbirds tuning their throats for the full marriage song of next spring, where should one sit if not in the sun?

There is a bench in one of our public parks that, by right of discovery, I claim. And there I am wont to sit and doze; away from the crowd, away from the mad world, away from my own troubles—and with the sun. I wish no other companion.

Great thoughts belong to great people, they are not for me. But the creative sun fills me with its warm balm and calms my soul which has been perturbed by world events. For, as compared with the world and evanescent me, the sun is eternal; and, with its life-and-death-giving rays, has beamed upon all the generations of man. After a long life, full of struggle to gain and maintain a place in the world, I am content to sit in the blessed warmth of the sun and absorb its goodness.

Many years ago, in reading a life of John Milton, I noted this statement: "That in his old age, and totally blind, he was wont on pleasant days to sit in his doorway in the sun." And, thereupon, I wondered what the great poet thought while sitting in the sun. Now I know that, while it is not for me to guess what John Milton thought, I may surmise that as far as possible he avoided thought and gave himself to the glow that suffused him. Thought and work, great prose and grand poetry, had rolled from that "organ voice" and had stirred the nation. Now, in his old age, it was not thought that demanded his attention; it was quiescent acceptance of the course of nature and the kindly warmth of the sun.

For old men to sit in the sun is a habit not nearly as old as the race. In the very earliest times, perhaps, no one ever reached old age; the hazards of hunting and of being hunted took care of that; and, later when certain handicrafts such as arrow and pottery making gave skill and value to a few of the aged, those few might be permitted to live on; but, sooner or later, when the old man became a burden to the tribe, a consumer rather than a producer, he was put away. So that the habit of sitting in the sun must be regarded as of comparatively recent origin; not older, perhaps, than recorded history.

But not all old men have been permitted to bask in the sun. Michelangelo, that supreme man, painter, sculptor, poet and architect, had no time to sit in the sun. Pope after Pope demanded his services until he died in his eighty-ninth year. After he has passed his sixtieth year and well beyond his seventieth he wrote some of his most beautiful sonnets to Vittoria Colonna. He was busy as chief architect with great designs long after he had passed his eightieth birthday: The remodeling of St. Peter's and the conversion of the Baths of Diocletian into the church of Sta Maria degli Angeli.

And, there was Voltaire. I doubt his sitting in the sun. He too was too busy to sit; he got his sun working in his garden; and he lived only a scarce 84 years. But years too full of work and enthusiasm to sit long in or away from the sun.

So that the habit is subject to exceptions for exceptional men who have earned the right to work on regardless of age. The rest of us, we of the common or garden variety, do suffer a slowing-down, a damping of vitality and vigor, a haziness of intellect somewhere along the declining years; and, for us, it is fit that we retire from active work, sit in the sun, and dream.

The habit, however, is really a slow form of euthanasia; a form that is gentle but certain. And, in quite modern times, we have encouraged this method of doing away with the old by arbitrarily retiring them at a certain age. For a man to be banished from his calling, not on account of any disability, but merely because he has reached the age of 60, or 65, or 70, is to strike him down, to tell him that he is useless, to use a disguised anesthetic in a new form of euthanasia.

But I believe in euthanasia, in the painless and peaceful death, particularly when accompanied by sitting in the sun. And I shall continue to sit in the sun and carelessly dream away the remaining days of my life so long as the sun shines and the days are warm. And I know that the reputed wisdom of age consists not in doing, but in not doing; in the quiet looking-on at the mad scramble of the world; in acquiescence rather than in strife. The warm sun eases the pain in my arthritic joints; it lulls me to a semi-comitose condition in which I recognize the futility of many of our efforts; and it soothes my senile anger over the wars in which the race thins itself and destroys culture.

Moral Hygiene

THE CHICKENS NEVER did roost too high for some of the friends of our Mr. James Farley, so it was indeed laughable of Mr. Farley to make grabs at his trunks and yell, "Ow! Keep your punches up!" When our Mr. Tom Dewey exposed the yeggmanship of certain Democratic statesmen in Albany in one of his recitations last week. It was indeed laughable to all who used to know Mr. Farley as chairman of the Cauliflower Commission and see him on fight nights at the Garden sitting just around the corner from the gorillas who, by order of the commission, were supposed to be excluded from those cultural exercises.

PEGLER

In the interest of moral hygiene, Mr. Farley's commission had ruled that criminals were not to be admitted to any of the fight clubs, even as cash customers, but on glamorous nights in those dear, dear, dizzy days of old our James, from his Cathedra, would gaze about and scan the countenances of the very cream—or should one say the scrum—of the New York underworld. Indeed (that's three times I have used that word; must watch), there came one grand gala when, with more than a million dollars in the house, there were three ex-convicts among the personal attendants of the tigers in the main event, all licensed by Mr. Farley's commission.

ON SUCH EVENINGS Mr. Farley's place was in a special row reserved for certain of the more eminent yeggs from the hall—fine, home-loving gentlemen all, with callouses on their hands, not from humble toil, but from handling of red-hot stoves in the routine of their daily life.

Mr. Farley has always been a man of liberal mind toward the hard realities of the world. He once explained that he lacked the cruelty to enforce his own regulations, which would have banished fallen men from pugilism, because, after all, they did have to live, and if every hand were turned against them and all doors barred they would be forced to resume a life of crime. For this I honor him, of course, but I think he should make that his stand publicly and defend the propriety of yeggmanship in politics in Albany on the ground that if yeggs be excluded from politics and pugilism they will have no alternative but crime of the most vulgar sort.

CERTAINLY IT DIDN'T take Mr. Dewey to discover that the gambling rights are regularly parceled out in the City of Saratoga Springs, so close to Albany that on quiet evenings the Governor, in his palace, may hear the little mothball whir and click and the little cubes gamboling on the green. In fact, gambling had become so important a part of the commerce of Saratoga Springs that when, last summer, through some political error, gambling was forbidden, some of the citizens formed a picket line to protest that their bread and butter was being taken away from them. There was much to their contention that gambling should be permitted, but the trouble was that it was against the law, a fact which necessitated the giving and taking of graft by politicians of the yegg type whom Mr. Dewey so piously deplores.

BUT EVEN CONCEDING the truth of all that Mr. Dewey says and his right to say it, I have been wondering whether Mr. Dewey has anything else on the ball. The job of governing New York is no mere matter of heaving yeggs out of petty office in local administrations, suppressing crap games and busting up rackets. For the most part those duties belong to the office of prosecutor, which Mr. Dewey now holds in New York. Mr. Dewey has not yet shown much appreciation of the greater issues, and Mr. Lehman has been one of the best Governors of his time in the entire country.

On the careers to date I don't think it would be an even trade and, moreover, if it was such an urgent matter to get Mr. Dewey into the district attorneyship so short a time ago, the same evils would require that he stay there and finish a job he gave us to understand he alone was qualified to do. As to many matters in his new candidacy Mr. Dewey seems to say: "If you love, dear, you'll trust me," and many a nice girl has regretted falling for that.

80 on 24-Hour Flight Of New Zeppelin

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Oct. 31 (AP).—With 80 persons aboard, including a crew of 45, Germany's latest dirigible, the LZ-130, took off this afternoon on her final trial flight before being taken over by the Zeppelin Co.

She was scheduled to remain in the air 24 hours and land tomorrow afternoon at Frankfort-on-the-Main air harbor.

(The LZ-130, christened the Graf Zeppelin, is slightly smaller than the Hindenburg, which was destroyed May 6, 1937, at Lakehurst, N. J. The Graf Zeppelin's length is 738 feet, the Hindenburg's was 803 feet.

Thanksgivings

The other day I had a chance to test public feeling at first hand. Before the calamity had become irrevocable I was invited to address (ten days later) a great gathering in a large city of the Midlands. I went to address it on the morrow of the "thanksgiving services" ordained by the Archbishop of Canterbury for "the preservation of peace" by the Munich agreement. A warning was given me that most of the thousands present would have attended those thanksgiving services, and that I might be badly received if I critized Mr. Neville Chamberlain's action. I resolved to test the feeling of my audience from the outset.

I said that one of the principles which had come to govern the religious and, to some extent, the public life of England was the principle of toleration, of agreeing to differ upon views and convictions honestly held. I invoked this principle in my own favor and went on to say that while my conception of Christianity might be unorthodox, I had held aloof from all thanksgiving services because I could not feel it a Christian duty to render thanks to the Almighty for sufferings which we had helped to inflict upon others weaker than ourselves.

Something like a groan of despair came from the audience at these words. And as I unfolded the story of Czechoslovakia, of the crisis, of the part which the British government had played in it and of its probable effects upon ourselves, I became persuaded that were I to ask that gathering for a resolution of censure upon British policy it would have been voted by an overwhelming majority.

Propaganda War

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

Japan's Barrage Of Words

Shanghai.

WHILE THE ARMIES of China and Japan are locked in a desperate combat at the approaches to Hankow, their propaganda machines are engaged in an equally bitter struggle along a world-wide front.

Japan's propagandists — because they must defend themselves abroad, bolster up morale at home and persuade the Chinese that the invasion of their land is for their own good—face a much more difficult task than their Chinese rivals.

Japanese domestic propaganda pours through a multitude of channels, both governmental and non-official. Of the former, the most important are the agencies and publications of the Fighting Services and the house-to-house "soul searching" by local administrators.

Of the nominally non-official channels, the most important are the National Mobilization Movement, financed and directed by the cabinet's "diehards," and the press.

The goal of propaganda within Japan is to revive and maintain the Nation's flagging interest in the war and to create the feeling that only a concerted national effort can save Nippon from the myriad of enemies surrounding her and covertly aiding China.

THE CONCURRENCE of the press with this "educational" campaign has been ensured by the simple means of inviting the publishers and managing editors of every paper in the land to the Army Headquarters on July 12—three days after the outbreak of the hostilities—and giving them instructions on the handling of the conflict in their news reports and editorial comment.

The order, disobedience to which was, of course, unimaginable, emphasized the need for stressing the Nation's unanimity in supporting the Army's plans and actions, at home and abroad.

One of the items on the long list of verboten subjects was the publication of reports "calculated to oppose war or abuse the army or bring about the alienation of the people from the army."

Also banned were items tending to create the impression that the Japanese are a bellicose people or that the nation's foreign policy is aggressive.

Occasional let-downs in public spirit have been promptly remedied by the Army—with the co-operation of all agencies of public opinion—by vitriolic verbal, and even military, attacks on powers other than China.

SINCE THE OUTBREAK of hostilities in this country, Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia have followed each other across the Japanese political stage as bogeymen, stirring the populace into a frenzy of patriotic unity.

In China, the main Japanese organs of propaganda were naturally the fighting services, acting through their sinister special service sections. Repeated attempts of the Tokyo foreign office to break into the limelight with various schemes for "cultural co-operation," "Pan-Asianism" and "Religious Unity" were not crowned with success.

The army's special service section carried out its activities through so-called "pacification squads," consisting of spies, old China traders, Japanese students and former dope peddlers—all intimately acquainted with the language and modes of the areas in which they operated.

The goal of these traveling propagandists was to secure the return of the populace in the war-torn areas to their homes and fields and to gain the co-operation of influential and vocal groups.

Especial attention has thus far been paid to the landlords in the agricultural regions and to industrialists and merchants in towns and cities. While the appeals used by the Japanese were essentially sound (defense against Communists, who desire confiscation of private property), the Japanese overtures were seldom successful for the simple reason that most of the property in the "occupied" areas had already been destroyed by the Japanese army itself.

APPEALS OF THIS type would have been especially effective in Shanghai—possibly to the extent of winning the war for Japan—had they not been accompanied by a systematic, relentless and seemingly senseless destruction of Chinese property.

By pauperizing Shanghai's influencial bankers and industrialists, the Japanese Army decisively changed the balance of power behind the Chinese political scenes, propelling the vocal radical elements into the honored place in the Councils of State once held by the so-called "Chekiang Financial Group."

Japanese efforts to win the sympathy of landlords were similarly unsuccessful, if for different reasons. The method employed by the Army was to annul all reduction made by the National government in the exorbitant land rents.

While this step would have been extremely popular with the wealthy landlords, there were too few of them left in the Japanese-occupied territory to make any difference. The vast majority had fled to the interior as soon as reports of Japanese excesses had begun to gain currency.

Moreover, all attempts to raise the already unbearable land rent served to alienate the great mass of small farmers and landless tenants, who would have probably otherwise remained indifferent to the form of government prevailing in their province.

Naive methods have been employed by the Japanese Army to gain the sympathy of the peasantry in general. Thus, in a Shantung town, the "Pacification Committee of the Imperial Army of Great Japan" issued a long proclamation, which said in part:

". . . Because we are strangers in a strange land, with different language and customs, the people are afraid and disturbed, and refuse to enter the city, which is the result of not facing the facts and of groundless suspicions; and whereas such feelings are utterly unjustifiable, the Pacification Commissioner has again ordered the local Organization For Maintenance of Peace and Order to issue this proclamation and earnestly endeavor to pacify the people.

"Though not a few have already returned to the city, those who stubbornly refuse to do so are more in number. So in order to do all in our power to accomplish the pacification of the people, we have summoned all the harlots from the surrounding country and established a brothel as a means of comforting the people. . .

"To those who return within three weeks after the publication of this proclamation, and set up house-keeping and reopen their shops, showing no lack of appreciation of the efforts of the Commissioner to pacify the people, the Commission assumes full responsibility for the protection of their life and property.

"But those who still hesitate to return to the city will be classed with the plain clothes soldiers (guerillas) and bandits as rebels. The Commission has full control of all the houses of such, and will award them at its own discretion to the good people to have and to hold as theirs forever."

AS FEW REPUTABLE property owners wish to, or dare to, associate with the Japanese, it is the riffraff who receive this property in reward for their services to the Japanese army. Little wonder, therefore, that guerrilla units receive such strong support from the populace in general.

The two main appeals of Japanese propagandists sought to persuade the Chinese of Nippon's peaceful intentions toward the civilian population and of her intention to do or die in protecting the Chinese from the menace of communism.

While both of these slogans would have gained wide favor in China had Japan used her military machine with restraint and intelligence, they have actually been made ineffective and tragicomical by the wholesale destruction and frightfulness displayed by the Japanese fighting services.

The American Stake in a Redistribution of Colonies

INFORMAL NEGOTIATIONS are, it would seem, already in progress looking toward a redistribution of colonial empires in Africa. Now the United States has not the slightest interest in African colonies and it wants none, and will not wish to have anything to say about what the European powers may decide among themselves. But since the western coast of Africa is on the Atlantic Ocean, a redistribution of empire in that region of the world will raise questions that the United States cannot ignore.

LIPPMANN.

For as matters stand now there is only one naval power in the Atlantic Ocean, the British, and for innumerable obvious reasons the British navy is no threat to American security in this hemisphere, or to the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine. That is the reason why up to the present time American naval power has been designed for the Pacific Ocean, and on the assumption that no great Navy was needed in the Atlantic Ocean. But since Munich it has become clear that the situation is greatly changed.

IT IS NOW AN OPEN question whether the British navy is able to exercise its former mastery of the Atlantic Ocean. What with the aerial threat to London, with the greatly weakened position of France, the defenselessness of Portugal and of the Portuguese islands half-way across the Atlantic, the condition of Spain, and the growing unrest in Africa from the hinterlands of Gibraltar and Suez to Cape Town, British maritime supremacy in the Atlantic is no longer what it was.

Under these circumstances the return to Germany of the former German colonies on the west coast of Africa, or a partition of the Portuguese empire, or both, would not only make Germany a naval power in the Atlantic Ocean, but could provide a potential base as near or nearer to the heart of South America than any base possessed by the United States.

Since Germany, Italy and Japan are acting in concert, even if they do not have an actual alliance, ordinary prudence will compel the United States to consider its own interest, and certain possible claims of its own, if there is to be a redistribution of empire on the shores of the Atlantic Ocean.

THOSE WHO WISH to understand the American aspect of the problem can do no better than to study the excellent maps published in the October 31 issue of Life, and to read as soon as it is published Maj. George Fielding Eliot's book, "The Ramparts We Watch." They will see from the maps and from the book that a redistribution of African colonies, particularly one which involved the dismemberment of the subjugation of the Portuguese Empire, could establish German naval and air bases nearer to the interior of South America than any base which the United States possesses.

Now this does not mean that Germany has any present plans for the invasion and conquest of territory in South America. But what it would mean is that the South American nations, and particularly Brazil, would soon conclude that if the Monroe Doctrine were ever put to a practical test, the United States would be too far away to maintain it effectively.

Today, our relations with Brazil are close. But the establishment of German naval bases nearer to Brazil than any bases we possess would act upon the relations between the United States and Brazil in much the same way that the militarization of the Rhineland in 1936 acted upon the relations between France and Poland, Yugoslavia, and the other nations of Central Europe. It would gradually dissolve the bonds which now unite this country with its Latin neighbors. For it is natural and inevitable that small nations are attracted to the strongest power that is nearest to them.

NAVAL POWER IS NOT a question of ships alone. It is a question no less of bases, that is, of fortified harbors where the ships can be repaired, fueled and provisioned and no navy however great is much good more than 2,000 miles from a base. We do not have a base from which the fleet could operate effectively in the South Atlantic, or perhaps even along the whole northern coast of South America. Until recently we have not needed such a base because no one else had one either. The British naval stations at Bermuda and Jamaica and the French naval station at Martinique did not have to be considered seriously because for the past two generations neither Britain or France could have contemplated any penetration of this hemisphere.

But if now the British and French are going to redistribute territory on the African side of the Atlantic, we may have to tell them that we also are compelled to consider whether we do not have to stake out some claims on this side of the Atlantic. We may have to tell them that if territory is to be ceded in Africa which establishes potential naval bases as near or nearer to the heart of South America than our own, then we shall have to talk about an arrangement of naval bases in this hemisphere to make up for the difference.

WE MAY HAVE TO talk about the purchase or lease of certain British and French colonies in the West Indies, say about the French island of Martinique and the British islands of Barbados or Trinidad for use as American bases, and perhaps also about what measures the British mean to take in order to make secure Bermuda, the Bahama Islands and Jamaica.

The British government and British public opinion will surely recognize from its own long experience in the maintenance of its naval power, that the raising of this question at this time is not a matter of sentiment and certainly not of aggressive ambition, but of national duty. Were the British in our position, they would be quick to see that the redistribution of African colonies is not solely a question of the economic exploitation of Africa but that it is also a question affecting the strategic position in the whole Atlantic Ocean, and the defense of this hemisphere. They would be the first to see that a failure on the part of the United States to take note of the consequences of a new naval position in the Atlantic, and to act accordingly and to act early, would mean that we did not understand our own position in the world as it now is.

IT IS DISAGREEABLE in the extreme even to have to contemplate the possibility of advancing an American claim for territorial rights at a time when the British are so hard pressed. But if Great Britain has come to believe that a redivision of Africa needs to be undertaken, then a change of sovereignty in one or two islands in this hemisphere can reasonably be considered at the same time. For these islands mean nothing of importance to the power, prestige or wealth of Great Britain, but they may mean very much indeed to the security of the United States.

If Mr. Chamberlain feels that he is protecting the empire by returning the African colonies to Germany, and that this will establish a long peace between Britain and Germany, then a concession to the United States in the West Indies ought not to be ruled out of consideration. A concession would strengthen the United States, promote peace in this hemisphere and make more secure the common interests of Britain and the United States.

For in strengthening our own defenses we do not threaten the British Empire. Britain knows that. On the contrary, we are the better able to defend that part of the empire, namely, Canada, which the geography of our vital interests, as well as sentiment, will always compel us to defend. For the defense of Canada and of the open door for British trade in Latin America depend upon American naval supremacy in this hemisphere, and upon the absolute security of the Panama Canal and the West Indies as the citadel of American power.

Two Take Oaths As New Aides To Morgenthau

By the Associated Press.

Two new officials of the Treasury took their oaths of office yesterday.

One was John W. Hanes, whom the President promoted last week from Assistant Secretary to Undersecretary of the Treasury. The other was Eugene S. Duffield, 30-year-old newspaper reporter, who was appointed a special assistant to the Secretary. The oaths were administered by Secretary Morgenthau.

Duffield, who will be the youngest executive in the Treasury, has been covering Treasury news since 1931. He has been with the Wall Street Journal for three years.

Hanes, who left a Wall street brokerage firm in January to join the Securities and Exchange Commission and help it conciliate its differences with the New York Stock Exchange, has been Assistant Secretary of the Treasury since July. He is in charge of tax administration and research.

Hanes takes the place of Roswell Magill, resigned. Duffield succeeds C. B. Upham, who recently became first deputy comptroller of the currency.

G. O. P. Seeks 1940 Timber

By Mark Sullivan

Good Material

IN THE AFTERMATH of the elections next week will be an eager search of the returns to find new material for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1940. The situation will depend on what the old arithmetic textbooks used to call "permutations and combinations." If they carry Ohio but not New York, they have a different situation. If they lose both New York and Ohio but carry Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts and California, the picture changes accordingly.

SULLIVAN

There is promising new Republican material among candidates for Governor and Senator in several States. Among them, the test is success next week—these elections are, so to speak, an elimination race. Today, a man may seem grade A material for the Presidential nomination; but if he fails to carry his State next week he more or less automatically becomes no grade at all.

On the assumption of success next week, the most clearly available man for the Republicans is their candidate for Governor of New York, Mr. Dewey. If Mr. Dewey carries New York next week, the search for Presidential material will be about over. Mr. Dewey would, in Mr. James Farley's idiom, have the Republican nomination of 1940 "in the bag." His comparative youth—36 now, 38 in 1940 when he would be nominated, and 39 when he would be inaugurated — would be overlooked. All that the Republicans and the country would take account of would be that he had broken a 16-year run of Democratic Governors and that he had carried the largest State in the Union, a State which is practically decisive in Presidential elections.

THE RULE THAT IN Presidential elections the party that can carry New York can carry the country has been broken only once in 50 years. Republican leaders, like Democratic ones, know the rule and would be guided by it. In 50 years, out of 26 Presidential candidates chosen by both parties from all the country, 8 have been taken from New York. If Mr. Dewey wins the New York governorship next week, hardly anything but death can prevent his being nominated for the Presidency by the Republicans in 1940—death or some fatal mistake, and the mistake would have to be so extreme as to amount to deliberate political suicide.

I do not think I state Mr. Dewey's availability too strongly. Nevertheless, if the Republicans next week carry both New York and Ohio, they would have two available men, Mr. Dewey and Mr. Robert Taft, Republican candidate for Senator from Ohio. As of next Wednesday, Mr. Dewey would have the advantage I have described—the factor of New York's size, and the desirability of carrying it in order to carry the country. Conceivably, during the ensuing two years, Mr. Taft might come forward in the Senate so conspicuously as to eclipse Mr. Dewey. But this is carrying speculation too far to be worth while.

IF, HOWEVER, the Republicans next week do not carry New York but do carry Ohio, in that event it is Mr. Taft who would stand out in almost solitary eminence. In the minds of political leaders in both parties Ohio has a magic second only to New York's. Ohio is a kind of key State. The rule that if you carry Ohio you carry the country is almost as accepted as in the case of New York. Only once in 50 years has either party failed to carry the country when it carried Ohio. In 50 years, out of 26 Presidential candidates chosen by both parties from all the country, 6 have been taken from Ohio. The Republicans throughout their history have taken more of their Presidential candidates from Ohio than from any other State.

If the Republicans next week do not carry either Ohio or New York they must find their new material in other States. There is possible material in several, depending on what States the Republicans carry.

I have been speaking of new material. There is in some States existing material which will be elevated in stature if the Republicans carry those States next week. In Massachusetts Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is not running. He was elected to the Senate in 1936, although the Democrats carried the State for President and other offices. Any Republican candidate for any office who carried his State in 1936 became a favorably marked man, for that was a year of Democratic landslide, the greatest of any party in recent history—the Democratic Presidential ticket carried every State except Maine and Vermont. Mr. Lodge in his two years in the Senate has increased the political momentum his remarkable 1936 victory had given him. The shrewdest political sage in either party, Vice President Garner, has occasionally told friends to watch young Mr. Lodge—he is 36—as a Republican Presidential possibility.

BUT POSSIBLY THE old rules about availability for Presidential nominations may change during the coming two years. Yet I do not think they will, much. Precedents in many fields, though under attack, hold their ground.

Britain's Defenses

By Barnet Nover

Locking The Stable Door

THE BRITISH government's decision to speed up the rearmament program shows how forced is Premier Chamberlain's professed optimism regarding the international situation after Munich.

Officially he stands by the view that from now on Hitler can be trusted to keep the peace. His emphasis on the necessity of expanding and improving Britain's defense system indicates, however, that he feels it will be possible to trust the dictators far more if Great Britain is strong than if she is not. But by the same token the new defense policy which is now being worked out constitutes an eloquent admission that thus far the present regime has badly bungled the job.

OF THIS THERE can be no doubt. Apologists for the Chamberlain government insist that Great Britain was forced to give way to Hitler on the Czechoslovak issue because she was in no position to risk an armed showdown with the Third Reich. In particular, it is said, Germany's overwhelming superiority in air power was such as to doom London and Paris to destruction regardless of the outcome of a war involving the three powers.

Whether this presumption is justified or not no one can say with any assurance. But insofar as it is true it constitutes an extremely damaging indictment of the defense policies pursued by the British government since Hitler came to power in Germany.

It is said by government spokesmen that the principal reason why Great Britain has lagged behind in rearmament is that, because of the pacifism for long preached by Laborites and Liberals, Britain's defenses had been brought to a hopeless state of deterioration. But this ignores the obvious fact that the Laborites have been out of power since the fall of 1931. During the entire period of increasing international anarchy from Japan's seizure of Manchuria in 1931 until today the government of Great Britain has been dominated by Conservatives. Obviously they did not or would not see the writing on the wall.

THE MANCHURIAN developments were, of course, remote and appeared at the time to have no direct bearing on events in Europe, although there were many in England and elsewhere who correctly interpreted the world significance of Japan's aggressive maneuver of 1931. But despite such ensuing developments as Hitler's rise to power, the withdrawal by the Third Reich from the disarmament conference and the League of Nations, Italy's Abyssinian adventure, the reintroduction of conscription by Germany and later the occupation of the Rhineland, Britain took only inadequate measures to cope with the developing situation.

This has been particularly true with respect to air armaments, the factor which proved crucial in the recent crisis.

EVEN BEFORE conscription was reintroduced in the Reich, there was mounting evidence that, under Gen. Goering's leadership, Germany was preparing to make itself master of the air. Those who pointed that fact out, however, were dismissed by British authorities as alarmists. Not until this year was any real attempt made by the British government to overtake Germany in the air and that attempt was, at best, halting, confused and utterly inadequate.

What Great Britain could have done to meet the German challenge is brought out by what she did do in World War days. From the beginning of that conflict until June 30, 1915, only 902 planes were produced in the kingdom. Production was slowly stepped up during the next year of war. But by the third quarter of 1918 the output was at the staggering rate of close to 2,900 units a month. This figure is to be contrasted with the 800 planes a month which, in most quarters, it is assumed is the present productive limit of all German airplane factories and which may actually be an exaggeration.

TO BE SURE the modern plane is a far more complicated piece of mechanism than was the crate of World War days. It requires far greater technical skill in construction and operation. But during that period Britain's technical resources have not stood still either. Had there been the will and the energy to keep pace with Germany the way would have been found.

What happened was that in this vital aspect of defense the British authorities pursued the old but dangerous policy of muddling through. That was true during MacDonald's premiership, when Stanley Baldwin was at the helm of affairs, and in the period since Neville Chamberlain jumped into the saddle. Nor was the bungling and inefficiency confined to the field of airplane production alone. If the now-it-can-be-told school of British writers are to be believed, the same holds true of the manufacture of anti-aircraft guns, the training of gunners, the co-ordination of the efforts of the national government and of the municipalities and in many other aspects of the problem of defending the British isles against the steadily increasing air menace from the continent.

NOW THAT THE horse has been stolen the Chamberlain government is determined to close the stable door. Just what is now to be done has not yet been revealed. It is assumed, however, that an attempt will be made to bring about a real co-ordination of defense efforts, for apparently there have been none worth their salt hitherto despite the presence in the cabinet of a man with the title of defense co-ordinator. Possibly Sir John Anderson, the newly appointed lord privy seal, will be assigned to perform that essential task. And, presumably, no cost will be spared even though Great Britain is already groaning under a terrifying burden of debt and taxes.

But as the London Economist sorrowfully points out, Great Britain is "starting on a desperate effort to ensure by arms a safety which a little courage and a little foresight at any time in these tragic years would have protected from all danger."

Insurance Only Issue in Health Parley

Other Matters Agreed On Compulsion Is Snag A. M. A. Opposed

Only the snag of compulsory sickness insurance prevented 100 per cent "agreement in principle" yesterday between seven representatives of the American Medical Association and Federal officials who met for their first discussion together of a proposed $850,000,000 health program for the Nation.

Dr. Irvin Abell, head of the medical group, who was made spokesman for the conference following its eight-hour session at the Department of Labor, declared the meeting was of "great mutual advantage"—although the five major provisions of the program were discussed only in principle.

"We approve all of the five points in general, with the exception of compulsory sickness insurance, upon which there will be future discussion," he said.

Other Meetings Scheduled

Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the President's Interdepartmental Committee to Co-ordinate Health and Welfare Activities, announced that another meeting with the A. M. A. committee would be held within a few weeks and that her committee would then hold meetings with other national groups interested in the subject of health.

Findings from all the conferees will be submitted to the President, along with any changes the A. M. A. committee may then recommend in its previous stand in favor of the five points—which call generally for "expansion of public health and maternal and child health services, expansion of hospital facilities, medical care for the medically needy, financing of the program, either from general taxation or special tax assessments or by compulsory sickness insurance, and sickness compensation."

Agreed on Standards

Dr. Abell asserted that upon one specific point all at the conference were agreed. "We are definite in our agreement that the quality and standard of medical care must be safeguarded, regardless of the type of program formulated.

"There shall not be two standards, one for the rich and another for the poor. All must receive the same high quality," he said.

Declaring herself enthusiastic over the general agreement of minds at the conference, Miss Roche said: "I think we are going to be able to work out a very wonderful program of health for the Nation."

Fear Political Control

The A. M. A. has opposed the idea of compulsory health insurance from the time it was suggested. It would be, the doctors have said, "a complicated, bureaucratic system which has no place in a democratic state" because it would lend itself "to political control and manipulation."

Members of the A. M. A. attending the meeting were: Dr. Rock Sleyster, president-elect; Olin West, secretary; Dr. E. H. Cary; Dr. Frederick E. Sonders; Dr. Fred W. Rankin; Dr. Walter F. Donaldson; Dr. Walter E. Vest; Dr. O. M. Leland, and Dr. J. D. Laux.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United State Public Health Service, was present as a member of the Federal technical committee on medical care, which is headed by Martha Eliot of the Children's Bureau. Other members of Miss Roche's committee in attendance included: Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board; Dr. E. L. Bishop, director of health for the TVA; Oscar L. Chapman, assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Charles V. McLaughlin, assistant Secretary of Labor.

GHA Doctor Testifies Before Trust Suit Jury, Then Praises A.M.A.'s Work in Fee Problem

What the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society have done to modernize the economics of medicine was praised yesterday by Dr. Richard H. Price after he testified before the grand jury which the Government will ask to indict the organizations for their campaign against Group Health Association, Inc., of which Dr. Price is a staff physician.

Two other Washington physicians appeared yesterday before the jurors, who this week also may hear the top-flight officials of the association tell why they believe their activities justified.

Dr. Lee Testifies

Dr. Allen E. Lee, heart specialist and diagnostician, testified for several hours. It was understood he told what he knew of the early history of G. H. A. He served a month on the staff, shortly after the organization. Desiring to retain his private practice he then resigned and continued as a member of the District Society. He would make no statement.

Dr. Roy D. Adams, a specialist in internal medicine, was in the secret hearing only a few minutes. "I was there and answered the questions and I don't care to say anything further," he said when he left.

The Government contends that the District society and the American Medical Association violated the Sherman antitrust act, which forbids conspiracies in restraint of trade, by a campaign against G. H. A. Its staff and physicians who consulted with them were threatened with expulsion from the society and G. H. A. patients found hospitals closed to them.

The witnesses yesterday made 17 who have appeared in the more than two weeks in which the Government has been presenting the mass of evidence indicated by several weeks of preliminary investigation. Two others called for yesterday did not appear. They were Drs. Frederick A. Moretti and Thomas S. Lee, who are due to testify later in the week unless plans are changed.

Dr. Price is general internist on the G. H. A. staff and a member of the A. M. A. He explained, as have previous witnesses, that he could not discuss what he said in the strictly closed hearing. However, he added:

"The group type of practice will be shown to be valuable both to patients and physicians—to patients because of the combined efforts of the various specialists in groups to diagnose and treat disease—to physicians because of the convenient association in practice with other members of the profession.

Satisfactory at Mayo

"This plan has been successfully carried out at the Mayo clinic, in Rochester, Minn., for a number of years, and has proved satisfactory to all concerned.

As to prepayment for medical services, some plan of this nature should be better both for patients and physicians—for patients because when emergency arises financial crises are prevented — for physicians because they can devote their entire time to medical activities without having to think of the patient's pocketbook.

"I am glad to learn that the District Medical Society is about to carry out a plan of this type and that the American Medical Association has authorized similar methods of practice throughout the United States. The need has become recognized for more adequate care of people with limited financial resources.

"Administration of group practice of medicine is in no danger of political dictation in this country, but is to be in accordance with the best interests of both the public and the physicians."

Dr. Price, who has been 21 years in practice, derided the idea that the group health fee plan is a dangerous innovation. He said it had been used by certain groups in this country since 1798.

Loss of Sleep Cuts Down Will-Power

Won't Help to Reduce
Wax Baths Dangerous
Liquid Diet 'Radical'

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE ARE so many novel schemes for reducing—most of them pure hearsay—that the average woman does not know what to believe.

You may have been urged to stand up for 20 minutes after every meal in order to get slim. There's not a word of truth in that promise, unless you stand up before you have overeaten and walk rapidly away from the table!

It is recurrently rumored that cutting down on your sleep will help you to cut down on your poundage, but what really happens on such a plan is that inertia sets in and your inclinations to activity dwindle. Another argument against going without sleep is that will-power and sleep seem to be closely related. The less sleep you get the less will-power you are able to muster for your diet. Don't attempt to reduce by burning the candle at both ends.

Wax Baths Dangerous

And what about all those rubber reducing garments, wax baths, magic lotions, cabinet baths, etc? The rubber garments cling tightly to the skin and make you warm and uncomfortable—no thinner.

The wax baths operate on the principle of producing more heat in the body to burn up the fat, and they do this by preventing the evaporation of perspiration. This method places so great a strain on all the organs, particularly the heart, that in medical circles it is considered extremely dangerous. Both the lotions and cabinet baths may accomplish a temporary loss in water, which appears to be weight loss. There is no reduction in actual body fat and the water is quickly restored to the tissues.

You have probably longed to get at the truth about liquid diets, water drinking and the use of salt . . . It is best to avoid the liquid diets. They entail too radical a change in the menu and usually cause weakness and an increased tendency to constipation.

You need plenty of water while you are reducing, so don't lessen the amount you drink. It is an excellent slimming rule, however, to avoid drinking water for one hour before and after the meal and during the meal. The objection to drinking water at these times is that it stretches the stomach. On a very strict diet, make it a rule to take only one cup of liquid of any kind with the meal.

It is not necessary to go on a salt-free diet, but you should use this mineral sparingly.

Eyebrow Hint

Because well-groomed brows demand a certain amount of plucking, Rosemary Lane, Hollywood star, begins by massaging the area with softening cream. Afterward she dampens the skin with a bit of cotton soaked in a solution of equal parts of ammonia, water and peroxide to discourage the speedy growth of the brows.

Unwashed Dishes

You survey the wreckage of food and dishes before you. You are so tired and—well a little puffed up under the belt. Oh well, you will not wash the dishes tonight—just stack them in the kitchen and clean everything up in the morning.

After all, nobody washes their dinner dishes any more until morning. And all the doctors say a person should rest just after a meal. Besides, you ought to go into the living room and be a charming companion to your husband. You've really been neglecting him for a lot of pots and pans. And all the writers say . . . well of course he isn't like that. Still there's no telling . . .

You clear the table hurriedly. In just a minute or two you will powder your nose, spray a little cologne in your hair, stroll in languidly and sink into a big chair and lift a smiling, interested face as he triumphantly reads aloud the more depressing foreign items. This time he will not have to bellow into the kitchen his "See, I told you!"

You stack the dishes and set the pans to soak. Of course, though it wouldn't take much time just to wash those few plates . . . and cups . . . and saucers . . . and glasses . . . and the silverware. And you could leave the pans——

Wait! There you go weakening! Somewhere back in the line you must have been cursed with a New England ancestor. No, you will NOT wash the dishes. You will put first things first. Those dishes will be there tomorrow—say, that's just the trouble! They WILL be there tomorrow! Sitting there all greasy and sticky in the chilly dawn when you start getting breakfast. What a mess! Well, maybe you HAD better wash those few dishes—it won't take a minute—and leave the pots and pans.

You gaze happily at the clean dishes, the sparkling glasses. Anyway you won't have to face a pile of dirty dishes in the morning. You can set the pans to one side sort of out of the way—Heavens, what a sight they are! Especially that greasy roaster. And the one where the corn pudding stuck. Of course you might—no you won't! You're going right in the living room and relax, and listen to the radio and look over the paper and enjoy yourself.

After all, why shouldn't you leave the pans? Nobody'll see 'em. Still though . . . you might get sick in the night . . . and if a doctor came . . . and then of course maybe a lot of strange people would be in the kitchen. And then besides, you had planned to go downtown in the morning and if they were out of the way you could get an early start . . .

No, you're just trying to make excuses. You will NOT wash the pans. That's just what's the matter with you. You're always washing pans when you ought to be doing something else.

You will go right in now and look at the paper . . . and see what radio programs are on—still, if you knew the pots and pans were out of the way . . .

Oh well, you might as well wash them and get it over. Then when you go in the other room you can really enjoy yourself.

New York, Oct. 31.

DOROTHY SHAVER is as smart a girl and crafty a business executive as Fifth avenue boasts, and that street and its alleys now have a flock of clever ones. She's the first vice president of one of the best and best-known department stores, and when she gets erect to speak she always says something good.

The other day Dorothy orated at a tea of the New York League of Business and Professional Women, and the theme of her talk was the current importance of being feminine in one's business clothes. And that's a hot point. For during the early years of our struggle for higher places in business and the professions, most women thought that "looking businesslike" consisted of wearing severe tailored suits, shingled hair, canal-boat shoes and a scowl. What rubbish! Now, as Dorothy well pointed out, they are established in many a saddle, and it is high time they took off their armor and were themselves.

"It is not only suitable, but definitely a part of a woman's job to wear soft, flattering clothes," said La Shaver. "Now that they command the respect of the masculine world, it is up to them to show through their clothes that they are still feminine, and a decorative as well as financial asset." Attagirl, Dot. How true, how true!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—All Saints' Day. Old Gaffer Hall will be at early church, no doubt, and I hope he prays for Heathenish Hughes up to the earrings in business bothers . . . Here's how our ace society chatterer reports the collapse of an international romance: "Geordie" Ward has gone back to England, and "Cookie" Young is again being seen around with "Bunty" Bacon. Lawsy me, don't you feel as though you had been at school with the three young folks? . . . New York, along with other towns, has had a treat. We have actually had a British noblewoman here who doesn't walk her title to Newport and Palm Beach and trade it for caviar, champagne, a good bed and a lot of cheap adulation by native snobs and pushers. I mean the Duchess of Atholl, Scots member of parliament who is active in good works. She wound up her local stay at a huge dinner for the benefit of the children of Spain, pleased and charmed everyone with her words and deeds. Come again and stay longer, Duch. . . . Ina Claire's leading man, Henry Daniell, that very able actor, is still laid up with a busted arm, but will rejoin the troupe before it opens here next week.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Taking Best Girl to Show, Man Meets Rival at Theater; He Joins Them; Was It Put-up Job?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a girl friend whom I very much admire and I have just about decided she would make me the ideal wife. But recently she and I were walking to a local movie house when we ran into a rival admirer of hers, and on her invitation he accompanied us to the show. This incident might have passed without raising any question in my mind except for the following:

About a year ago I was talking with a mixed company of friends when the question arose as to a woman's ability to capture the man of her choice. One of the young married women present (let's call her Jewel) made the remark that any girl could win the man she wanted if she exercised the right technique; that every woman has the power to do it, and that it is up to her to use it or not. To illustrate her point, she gleefully related the following incident which occurred during her own quest for a husband:

Prior to her marriage she had several admirers, all of whom she encouraged to visit her, allowing each to believe that it was really worth his while to bestow his time and affections upon her—when, as a matter of cold fact, she knew that she was seriously interested in only one of them, and was using the others' attentions as a weapon for making him jealous and hastening his proposal.

She stated that on one occasion, one of the "innocent victims" came to call and invited her to go driving. She accepted, asking to be excused for a moment while she went upstairs to make a telephone call. Then she telephoned the man of her choice and told him that one of his rivals was taking her driving; that she wanted him to go along, and that if he would be standing on a certain street corner at a certain time, they would drive by and pick him up. Without telling her gullible chauffeur what she had done, she set forth with him on the drive, suggesting a certain route. In due time, they came upon this fellow at the appointed corner. Feigning surprise, Jewel had the driver stop and invited him to get in, which he did, crowding in to the two-seater coupe.

Most of us sharply disagreed with Jewel's theory that any woman can ensnare any man by a calculated technique, and we further expressed disapproval of the incident described — even though it was one of a series of maneuvers which led, eventually to her marriage to him. Since my recent experience was so similar to that described by Jewel, do you think it falls in the same classification of put-up job? Also, I would like your opinion concerning Jewel's theory and practice. Is such philosophy and such conduct to be commended? What do you think of Jewel and the man who who played the other fellow for a sucker? And what you advise me to do in relation to my own girl?

PERPLEXED.

Coincidental Encounter

DEAR PERPLEXED: It would be my guess that at least 50 per cent of all marriages come to pass as the result of some woman's suave determination to have and to hold that particular man she eventually captured. However, the actual figures can never be known until the Book of Judgment has been opened for all to read. I see no reason why a woman should be blamed for exercising what we might call honorable initiative in selling a given man on the proposition of their unique mutual compatability—but that is a far cry from condoning such petty trickery as Jewel advocates. Her conduct on the occasion instanced was sophomoric, to say the least. If she were very young at the time, say of high school or college age, one might dismiss it as a prankish gesture of foolishly funloving youth; but if she were a person of mature years, it was an inexcusably ill-bred, unpardonably underhanded thing to do, and I am sure the average woman would join me in this opinion.

Moreover, the average man of decent instincts, who had graduated from beardless youth, either would refuse to be party to so awkward an enterprise, or, once hastily committed, would react most unfavorably to the woman who had drawn him into the callous deception. Subconsciously he would identify himself with the unsuspecting victim and feel an almost personal resentment of the feminine insincerity that had jockeyed the fellow into a fool's position. Embarrassed for his brother and ashamed of himself for using the other as a convenience, he would dislike the woman for having brought him so low in his own esteem.

It is my opinion that Jewel's husband-stalking technique was pretty crude, if the above instance is a fair example of her general tactics. But the man she married may have been a rather crude individual, too. Perhaps they make a perfect pair of practical jokers. If he is another sort of man, one can only suppose he married her in spite of her performance, rather than because of it.

As for your mental distress over the theater incident, I honestly believe you are starting at shadows. It would be my supposition that the encounter was purely coincidental. And if the man is a mutual friend, it was the most natural thing in the world that he should have been invited to join you for the show. It would have been a rather pointed lapse from good manners, under the circumstances, not to have asked him, and as a matter of fact you should have been first to extend the invitation. What is more inevitable than that three acquaintances, converging upon a public auditorium, should spontaneously agree to find seats together?

Woman Senator To 'Go Back Home'

San Juan, Puerto Rico.—Puerto Rico has only one woman senator, Maria Perez Almiroty. She's 55, a widow with two grown children. She's on the job at every session, keeping close tabs on all proposed legislation.

Senator Almiroty is vice president of the minority Liberal Party. But she's tired of "fighting for minority causes which never have a chance." She's waiting for her term in office to end so she can retire to a quiet life in her modest suburban home.

Experiments in Starving Aid Knowledge of Nutrition

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A great deal of knowledge about nutrition has been accumulated by studying men who starve for a certain period of time.

A starving animal must live upon the material present in its body. From starvation experiments we can learn then what tissues are first attacked and which suffer the most internal loss when the body must live on its reserves.

As one might expect, it lives mostly on its fat. Voit took two cats of nearly equal weight and fed them equally for ten days. Then he killed one so as to have a standard of comparison for the weight of the organs, and starved the other for 13 days. The animal lost 1,017 grams and part of the loss was distributed as follows:

Fat—267 grams, or 97 per cent calculated on the basis of the original weight of fat in the body.

Muscle—429 grams, or 30 per cent.

The greatest absolute loss was in the muscles, but the greatest percentage loss was from the fat. The heart and brain, although they were in continual activity, suffered practically no loss in weight. They lived at the expense of the other organs.

Several professional fasters have lent themselves for scientific experiment. One of the most famous of these was named Succi. One of the important things learned from experiments on him was the estimation of the total protein requirement of the body.

In order to understand this, remember that the body is made up largely of protein, and that the protein tissue of the body is constantly breaking down and must be replaced. There is, on the contrary, no basic requirement for starches, which simply furnish energy. You will need less starches when lying in bed than when running a mile race, or playing a game of tennis. The same is true of fat. The requirement for these foods varies with the activity and age and size of the body. But protein loss is going on at the same rate night and day, and must be replaced in the food. So it is very essential to know how much protein loss goes on.

Starvation experiments on growth bring out an interesting thing. If an animal is growing rapidly and is suddenly starved, the growth naturally stops. When feeding is resomed, the tendency is for growth to stop.

Mrs. Roosevelt Reveals 'Impression' Royal Britons Will Stay at White House

U. S. Visit by King and Queen Still Indefinite First Lady Discusses Possibility With Press Leaves Tomorrow to See Children in West

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

In her first press conference since the conclusion of her recent lecture tour, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday threw new light on where the King and Queen of England will, or may, be entertained . . . when, and if, they come to Washington.

HOPE R. MILLER.

They will stay at the White House, she said. Then she added hastily this was merely "an impression," and not an official decision. On further questioning she observed that, of course, they might stay elsewhere "if it would mean greater comfort for them."

As to which rooms might be reserved for the royal pair, or how their entourage could be accommodated in the White House, she did not explain. Instead, she implied there was plenty of time to work out such details, and that she had no further information about when, or whether, they would be here.

In view of Mrs. Roosevelt's "impression," it would seem Washington residents can quit bothering about where the royal visitors will hang their hats, if they come here.

All this tea-table talk about there being no place in town big enough and luxurious enough to house England's King and Queen is a bit on the boring side, anyway. Truth is, if these reigning sovereigns do get a chance to sample the famous Roosevelt hospitality under the White House roof they probably will have the time of their lives—even though, from a royal point of view, their quarters may be cramped.

Has Solved Problem Of 'Traveling Light'

But back to the Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference. As usual, the First Lady touched on a variety of topics in answering questions during her hour with the women of the press. A discussion of the wardrobe she takes along on her lecture tours came in for some attention, and she said she tried out a new plan on her recent trip. She took only one evening dress, a black velvet foundation frock that can be transformed into two others. It can be worn with a long-sleeved jacket and thus become a dinner dress. A brocaded guimpe that drapes over the shoulders and down the back into a train can be added for formal evening effect; or the dress, which is sleeveless, floor length, noncrushable black velvet, goes very nicely alone.

She takes one bag and her brief case when she goes a-lecturing. The only hat she has along is the one she wears. As to her new hair-do—which was reported to have caused so much comment recently in the Middle West—it is very much the same as the one she has favored for some time, she said.

Talk then turned to Mrs. Roosevelt's belief that every room should have a clothes closet "with a door in it," and someone asked how the President managed to keep all his wearing apparel in the one closet that belongs to his room. The Chief Executive, so his wife said, has a great fondness for old-fashioned wardrobes, and prefers to keep his clothes in these antique pieces of furniture.

Leaving Tomorrow For Trip to West

A "flying jaunt" to her "faraway children" is the new item on Mrs. Roosevelt's full program. She will wing off from Newark, N. J., tomorrow for Seattle, Wash., to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettinger, and her grandchildren, Anna Eleanor Dall and Curtis Dall.

From Seattle she will fly to Hollister, Calif., for a brief stay with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, and then she will be off by air again for Fort Worth, Tex., to visit the Elliott Roosevelts. Her itinerary will depend, of course, on weather conditions, and she could not give her schedule day by day. However, she will be back by Tuesday to cast her vote with the President at Hyde Park.

John Prestons Are Entertained By Mrs. Dwight

Mr. and Mrs. John Preston, son-in-law and daughter of Mrs. John Henry Dwight, were guests of honor at a small cocktail party given by Mrs. Dwight yesterday afternoon in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Wearing a dark red crepe frock fashioned street length and cut on simple lines, the hostess received her 35 guests informally. Mr. and Mrs. Preston recently arrived in Washington for a brief visit and will go from here to Mount Kisco, N. Y., to be the guests of Mr. Preston's parents for a few days before returning to California, where they make their home.

Mr. Preston will leave for New York this evening. His wife will linger, going to Mount Kisco to meet him Thursday. They expect to leave for their new home in Burlingame, Calif., on November 17.

Holcombs Fete Colonel Biddle

Following a review at the Marine Barracks yesterday afternoon in honor of Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, of Philadelphia, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Barracks, and Mrs. Holcomb entertained at a reception in the colonel's honor and later at a dinner at their quarters.

Col. Biddle, educated in Philadelphia and Heidelberg, lived for a time in the Madeira Islands, was a member of the staff of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, headed the publishing house of Drexel Biddle and served as a captain of Marines during the World War in France. He has continued in the Marine Corps as a member of the Marine Corps Reserve.

Receiving in the flower-banked drawing room of their quarters, Mrs. Holcomb wore a floor-length tea gown of dusty rose with a panel of lavendar crepe which extended from neckline to hem of the gown.

Yellow dahlias formed the centerpiece in the dining room and sunshine yellow candles gleamed against the silver. On the entire lower floor clusters of chrysanthemums and dahlias carried out the color scheme of yellow, bronze and pink.

Dinner at 8 o'clock followed the reception. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson, daughter and son-in-law of Col. and Mrs. Biddle; Gen. and Mrs. William P. Upshur, Col. and Mrs. Holland Smith, Col. and Mrs. E. P. Moses, Mrs. E. D. Bugby and Col. Biddle. Mrs. Biddle was unable to come to Washington.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

EVEN THOUGH Mrs. Creighton Peet did unexpectedly take off for South America 12 hours after she undertook to start a skating club in Washington, the group has been formed and invitations came out yesterday for the new venture.

James Clement Dunn is chairman of the Ice Club, as it has been christened, with Mrs. Peet as vice chairman. Mrs. Donald Hiss, of Georgetown is secretary and John C. Borton, treasurer.

DUDLEY HARMON.

ON THE BOARD of governors are Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Borton, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clephane, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hiss, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan C. Wyeth and Mr. and Mrs. McKee Dunn.

As membership is limited, acceptances will be considered in the order in which they are received. Sessions will begin December 1 and continue through March. Adults will meet on Sunday mornings from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. and on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 8. Children will skate early Sunday morning and on Wednesday afternoons.

Everybody is bemoaning the fact that the new skating rink on Connecticut avenue is too small to allow for professional hockey matches.

A FRIEND has arrived in Washington from Mexico City teeming with news about former residents now living there.

Countess Naselli, the former Helen Wardman, will join her mother, Mrs. Harry Wardman, of Washington, in the near future and expects to be here over Christmas. Count Naselli is planning a trip to Europe during that time. He and his wife have been living in the Mexican Capital since their marriage here two years ago last summer.

Our friend also saw fascinating Senora Luis de Irujo, whose husband was Counselor of the Spanish Embassy here before the revolution. She went to Mexico City shortly after the Spanish war broke out and has been there off and on ever since, but will leave shortly to join her husband in London. He is there as assistant to Franco's representative, the Duke of Alba.

Our friend also says that Ricardo Siri, formerly of the Argentine Embassy here, is "having a wonderful time" in Mexico City, where he was transferred several weeks ago.

THE PRESIDENT, who once broke yet another precedent by receiving an envoy presenting credentials in a common or garden variety of business suit, went back again to the orthodox cutaway the other afternoon when the Dominican Ambasador and the newly arrived Chinese Ambassador presented their credentials. Although both had appointments for the same afternoon, it seems that all envoys must be received separately, or else it doesn't count. There is much formality attached to the business. The envoys are called for by an aide, met at the White House by the State Department Chief of Protocol, and then chaperoned back to their embassy or legation again. It all runs like clockwork, and nobody is ever kept waiting.

GEN. and Mrs. William Mason Wright have definitely given up the winter in California which they were contemplating. They will probably remain in Washington.

MRS. WILLIAM A. DOELLER of Warrenton was recently presented a large silver cup by John A. Hinckley of the hunting center. You will have to ask Mrs. Doeller what she did to gain the trophy.

G. E. Levings Are Moving In

George Edward Levings, of Mississippi, who has just become connected with the Federal Power Commission, and Mrs. Levings, of South Carolina, have taken an attractive farmhouse on Lemon road at Falls Church, Va., and are now in the midst of moving in.

Mr. Levings, a West Pointer and prominent New Deal lawyer, is a relative of Col. Harry C. Pillsbury and Gen. George Pillsbury, who were recently stationed in Washington. Mr. Levings is also a cousin of South Trimble, clerk of the House of Representatives. The Levings have two children.

Charles Russells Are Halloween Dinner Hosts

Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Russell entertained at dinner in the Blue Room at the Shoreham Hotel last evening, their party being one of the many celebrating Halloween.

Guests were Capt. and Mrs. Raymond Dailey, Mr. and Mrs. Sefton Darr, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blakeney, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy H. Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Kertz, Mrs. Charles Bedter and Edmund Oakes.

Betrothal Told

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Levy announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Levy, to Melvin Allen Miller, of Washington and Boston. No date has been set for the wedding.

Elizabeth Maria Klein Bride Of Edward Blake White, Jr.

Before an altar decorated with white chrysanthemums, Miss Elizabeth Maria Klein yesterday morning became the bride of Edward Blake White, jr. The ceremoney was performed at 9:30 o'clock at St. Gabriel's Church by the Rev. William J. Sweeney.

Miss Klein, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Klein of this city, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white taffeta dress, with puffed sleeves and a full skirt. Her veil of net was draped from a tiara and she carried a bouquet of white roses tied with a satin ribbon.

Miss Helen B. White, sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor. She was attired in hyacinth blue taffeta, trimmed with velvet bows of American beauty shade, and her full skirt was fashioned in three tiers. Her veil was fastened to a velvet cap of the same color as her dress, and she carried deep red roses.

Edward Hudson, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., was the best man, and the two ushers were Thomas E. Gowen and Richard Barse.

At the reception the mother of the bride wore a gown of wine velvet with black accessories, and a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Edward B. White, sr., the mother of the bridegroom, was dressed in royal blue velvet, and had a corsage of yellow roses.

After a tour through New York State and Canada, including a visit to Niagara Falls, the couple will reside at 832 East Hutchinson avenue, Edgewood, Pa.

The former Miss Klein is a graduate of the Corcoran and Abbott Art Schools. Mr. White, the son of Edward B. White, sr., of Washington, is an alumnus of Catholic University.

Belgian Prime Minister Guest Of Nation's Embassy at Dinner

British and French Envoys Attend Many American Officials Are Present Dr. Van Zeeland Here to Lecture

Dr. Paul van Zeeland, Prime Minister of Belgium, was guest of honor at a dinner given last evening by the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz. The party took place at the embassy.

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, headed the list of guests. Others in the company included the Swiss Minister, Marc Peter, and the Yugoslav Minister, Constatin Fotitch.

Still others there were Adolf A. Berle, jr., assistant secretary of State; Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Jay Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the Division of European Affairs of the State Department; James Clement Dunn, advisor on political relations of the State Department, and Herbert Feis, advisor on international economic affairs of the State Department.

Also Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board; Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross; H. Charles Spruks, of the Division of Protocol of the State Department; Dr. W. H. Dodds, president of Princeton University; Mgr. Guilday, professor at Catholic University, and the president of the American Alumni of the University of Louvain; James G. Whitely, Belgian consul general at Baltimore; Arthur Krock, Walter Lippman, Newbold Noyes and Drew Pearson.

Those who were present from the Belgian Embassy staff were the counselor, Baron Herve de Gruben; Jacques de Thier, the first secretary, and Charles Leonard, assistant agricultural attache.

Dr. van Zeeland, who arrived last week on the Ile de France, will be in this country on a two-months' lecture tour. He made a brief visit to Washington in June, 1937, and on his trip to the United States then he was widely feted and received an honorary degree at Princeton University. He did post-graduate work there in economics.

Witthoeft-Emdens To Give Dinner At Home Tonight

Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, naval attache of the German Embassy, and Frau Witthoeft-Emden will entertain at dinner this evening in their pent-house apartment at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred.

The event will be in the nature of a house-warming and is the first dinner party planned by the couple since their marriage in Berlin last summer.

Miss O'Connell Is Married to W. R. Freund

Her Cousin Officiates Misses Tappan, Smith Aid Mr. Cameron Best Man

With her cousin, the Rev. William A. O'Connell, O. P., officiating, Miss Frances Margaret O'Connell yesterday morning was married to William Ralph Freund at St. Peter's Catholic Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Connell, of Washington.

Wearing a gown of ivory ring satin and Alencon lace, Miss O'Connell was given in marriage by her father. Her dress was fashioned with sleeves puffed at the shoulders, and tapering down to points over the wrists. Her veil fell from a band of satin and orange blossoms and she carried gardenias.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

Her sister, Miss Mary O'Connell, was maid of honor and was gowned in garnet velvet, made on Empire lines. She wore a tiara of gold sequins and carried gold chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids, in sapphire blue velvet similar to that of the maid of honor, were Miss Nora Tappan and Miss Mary Elizabeth Smith, of Bridgeport, Conn. They also wore gold tiaras and had bouquets of gold chrysanthemums. Little Barbara Ann Cameron, the bride's godchild, was flower girl and wore blue taffeta.

George Cameron Is Best Man

George E. Cameron, of Louisa, Va., served as best man and ushers were John O'Connell and Carl M. Viner.

Following the reception at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left on a wedding trip. The former Miss O'Connell wore for her traveling costume a blue dressmaker suit and dark blue accessories. She attended Dumbarton College and is a member of Sigma Epsilon sorority. Her husband is an alumnus of St. John's College and also attended Columbus University.

Shakespeare a Modern, Dr. Dunn Divulges

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Shakespeare was a modernist and the theater today is just beginning to catch up with him.

This is the opinion of Dr. Esther C. Dunn, professor of English literature at Smith College, who finds her students as interested in the study of Shakespeare as in modern playwrights.

Dr. Dunn, here for the meeting yesterday of the membership committee of the American Association of University Women, stopped long enough between the conferences of committee members to discuss Shakespeare's place in the modern college of liberal arts. She also spoke on the subject Sunday at a tea given in her honor by the Smith Club at the home of Margot Chase.

For many years, at least until 1914, Shakespeare was studied as a great classic, she said—Today he is found to be as modern and alive as the present-day dramatists.

It is not a matter of whom to draw a parallel between the Shakespearean productions of the Elizabethan era and methods being adopted by the modern theater, she declares. It is based on the soundest discoveries of new evidence about the theater of that age—discoveries for which Sir John Dower Wilson, of Edinburgh has been largely responsible.

"Shakespeare kicked over what few properties there were," said Dr. Dunn who is convinced his slight dependence on them was a method of production rather than a want of facilities. Modern technique confirms his genius in this respect, she pointed out.

He is as much of the present as any of the modern playwrights, she declares, and attributes the interest in her Shakespeare course at Smith to this fact. The students find material there for their study of production methods, lighting and settings in their relation to the present-day theater.

Dr. Dunn, who is the author of "The Literature of Shakespeare's Era," published two years ago by Scribners, is now writing "Shakespeare in America," which will be published next year by McMillan. She promises that this book will be a means of testing America's cultural development.

Members of the A. A. U. W. membership committee, who met here yesterday, in addition to Dr. Dunn, were Dr. Katherine Rogers Adams, of American University, the chairman; Dr. Eunice Morgan Schenck, dean of the graduate school at Bryn Mawr; Dr. Helen Caldwell Davis, director of student teaching at Colorado College of Education; Dr. Marie Dye, dean of the division of home economics at Michigan State College; Dr. Marie Reimer, professor of chemistry at Barnard College, and Prof. Jessie A. Humphries, associate dean of Texas State College for Women at Denton, Tex.

Greenbelt Mayor Addresses Club

Louis Bessemer, first mayor of Greenbelt, addressing members of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday, denied charges that the new town is a regimented community.

No one has ever been solicited to come to Greenbelt and before it was ready more than 20,000 applications for residence had been received of which only a small fraction could be admitted, he said.

Bessemer was introduced by Mrs. Edward Keating, chairman of the program committee. At the speakers' table were Mrs. Keating, Mrs. Guy Mason, Mrs. Charles Riordon, Mrs. Peter John McGovern and Mrs. Edgar B. Kay.

Among those entertaining guests were Mrs. Benjamin King, Mrs. Charles C. Cook, Mrs. M. Farmer Murphy, Mrs. Luke I. Wilson, Mrs. Edmund Pendleton, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Willoughby Reade and Mrs. Charles J. Brand. Others present were Mrs. J. Monroe Johnson, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. J. Craig Peacock; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Julien Friant, Mrs. William Frederick Weigester, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Ogilvie Shumate, Mrs. Albert A. Jones and Mrs. J. Brent Clarke.

Scott D. A. R. Chapter Card Party Set Nov. 14

Frances Scott Chapter of the D. A. R. will meet this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Charles E. Margerum, 437 Emerson street northwest. Assisting the hostess will be Mrs. Frank B. Bell and Mrs. John Eckhardt.

Plans will be completed for a benefit card party to be given at the Arts Club, 2017 I street northwest, November 14, at 2 p. m. to assist in financing the welfare work of the chapter and scholarship to Glen Eden School. Mrs. W. R. Cole, of Florence Courts, is chairman.

Mrs. Edgar Loren Rex, of Wichita, Kans., national chaplain general of the D. A. R., and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, District of Columbia State regent, will be guests of honor at the meeting of the Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter to be held today at the home of Mrs. Ralph Endicott, 6625 Thirty-Second Place northwest.

Further plans for the continental ball and card party to be given by the chapter on November 15 at the Wardman Park Hotel also will be made. Miss Mary Sprigman, vice regent, is general chairman.

Beta Sigma Omicron Luncheon Set Saturday

The Washington Chapter of Beta Sigma Omicron National Sorority will be entertained at luncheon Saturday at the home of Mrs Donald S. Thompson, 10 East Leland street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Plans will be formulated for the chapter's celebration of the national organization's Golden Jubilee Founders' Day next month. It is probable a historical setting will be chosen for the banquet.

Chinese Girl Reserves Keep Busy

Federation Sets Consumer Aid

Announcement is made in the November issue of the Clubwoman GFWC, official magazine of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, of a project in consumer education being undertaken by the Consumer Education Institute of Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., with the cooperation of General Federation. The plan is discussed by Dr. John M. Cassels, director of the institute.

Under the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, research into consumer problems has been carried on at the college for the past year. Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation, seeking such an agency of unbiased approach to the subject, learned of it and offered the cooperation of the federation.

Women of the member clubs will be asked to answer a questionnaire on various angles of the problem, including the chain-store controversy and housing.

Clubs near the college will join in expermental work to test preliminary material for an adult educational program.

This will finally take form in a course to be used by women's groups throughout the country, with a consumer education newsletter and booklets, radio programs and motion pictures a future possibility.

Dr. Cassels conferred with Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, first vice president of the federation, and Dr. Josephine Pierce, of Lima, Ohio, chairman of the Department of the American Home, as well as with Mrs. Dunbar, in outlining plan for the co-operative undertaking.

Committees Are Named

Mrs. James Edward Duke, chairman of the committee on arrangement, has named her committee for the benefit bridge tea for St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts at the Wardman Park Hotel at 2 p. m. December 5. Mrs. Augustus E. Giegengack, is in charge of Tickets, Mrs. Frank Slingluff, jr., refreshments and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, patronesses.

On Program

Miss Elena Crivella, well known Washington pianist, will be heard Saturday afternoon at the tea and musicale being sponsored as a benefit by the Columbian Women of G. W. U. On the rogram with her will be Irving Lean, violinist of the National Symphony Orchestra; Marjorie H. Miller, soprano, and Gay Hess, of the radio

Mrs. David M. Lea Returns for Tea At Episcopal Home

Mrs. David Meade Lea has returned to Washington and opened her home at 2112 Massachusetts avenue after spending several weeks in the West.

Mrs. Lea is president of the Board of Lady Managers of the Episcopal Home for Children, which has issued invitations for a tea today from 4 to 6 at the Home, Nebraska and Utah avenues, East Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Lea and the vice presidents, Mrs. Arthur A. Birney, Mrs. Copeland P. Jones and Mrs. Andrew P. Duvall will receive the guests, and other officers and members will show them around the buildings of the Home.

Y. W. C. A. Busy On Halloween

From "cellar to garret" there were things going on last night at the Administration Building of the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, where open house was held, following that in the afternoon at the 614 E street "Y."

Visitors last evening found the Halloween party of the industrial department in progress in Barker Hall; the meeting of the Youth Congress on the roof, a rehearsal of the glee club, and many enjoying the bowling alley.

There was also a Girl Reserve Halloween party in full swing.

One of the most interesting of the 34 groups in the Girl Reserves is the Mei Ling Club, composed of Chinese school girls in Washington and named for Mme. Chiang Kai-shek. There are 16 members, all of whom attend American school from 9 to 3 o'clock and Chinese school from 4 to 6 during the week and, on Saturdays, the latter from 10 to 12. There they study the Cantonese, Mandarin and Pekingese dialects.

In addition to their homework for the two schools, these girls do all they can to help China. They assisted at the "bowl of rice" parties last year and have ushered and sold flowers at various other benefits. On Sunday they will take part in a play, "By the Pearl River," at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. It will be presented in Chinese for a Chinese audience, and the proceeds will go toward the fund for war refugees. The Ambassador of China, Dr. Hu Shih, will speak.

The girls also will take part in the Community Chest pageant as the Mei Ling Club.

The club meets every Friday night and the members include in their recreational program bowling, hiking, picnicking and sewing. Miss Janet Feiker, 2137 Bancroft street, is their leader. Officers of the club are Alice Lee, president; Mary Lee, council representative; Irene Moy, secretary; Rose Lee, treasurer, and Betty Lee, vice president. The name "Lee" is almost as usual among the Chinese as "Smith" among Americans and does not indicate in this case that the offices are all held by one family.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

A GROUP of distinguished guests has been invited to the opening luncheon of the Woman's Safety Committee of the D. C. Motor Club, being held tomorrow at the Sulgrave Club. Mrs. George C. Thorpe, president of the committee, who spent last summer in Europe studying the traffic situation, will tell of her observations.

The guests will include Mrs. Ralph Close, wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa; Lady Leslie, who is spending the winter in Washington; Mrs. David McCoach, wife of the new engineer commissioner; Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Assistant Commissioner Capt. Hoel S. Bishop, and Hugh Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High School.

Also among the guests will be Mrs. Charles H. March, wife of the United States Federal Trade Commissioner; Mrs. Ernest Brown, wife of Maj. Brown; Miss Margaret Merrill, head resident at Neighborhood House; Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center; Mrs. B. M. McKelway and Mrs. Henry Quinn.

THE JUNIOR WOMEN'S CLUB of Takoma Park will meet next Tuesday night at the Jessup-Blair Community House with a program of motion pictures taken by Robert Mauger, of Takoma Park, while he was abroad last summer, and a talk on "The Art of Make-up" by Mrs. C. A. Shattuck.

Mrs. John T. Lucker, Mrs. Jack Cory, Mrs. Perry O. Huff and Miss Catherine Haislip will be the hostesses.

James P. Moody, Arlington County welfare supervisor, has been announced as speaker for a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of Robert E. Lee School tomorrow night.

AT THE DINNER given by Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, for members of the executive board of the District of Columbia branch of the L. A. P. W., Mrs. Azalea Green Badgley, past president of the branch and past State president, presented Mrs. Tyler with a check to cover what will be known as the Green Badgley prize for heraldic illustration. The rules will be in accord with present regulations regarding art groups in the League of American Pen Women. This award will be continued for five years.

Mrs. Badgley is the wife of William Walton Badgley, registrar of the S. A. R. and active in the S. R., the Society of Colonial Wars, and the Society of the War of 1812. Her interest has long been centered around heraldry and her hobby is, "making young people ancestry conscious." She is herald and a member of the National Geneological Society. At present she is engaged in making heraldic illustration for Dr. Jean Stephenson's articles on heraldry which are appearing in the National Historical Magazine.

In addition to serving on the board of the District of Columbia branch of the L. A. P. W. for ten years, she is a member of the Entre Nous, the University Club, the Arts Club, and retains her D. A. R. membership in the Rachel Donelson Chapter in Springfield, Mo.

Dr. Helen D. Reid Talks Here Tonight

Dr. Helen Dwight Reid will address the University of Buffalo Alumni on "Civil Service as a Career" at a dinner meeting tonight at 7 o'clock in Wesley Hall. Mrs. Omer Redding and Mrs. James Redding are in charge of the affair.

Dr. Reid, a Vassar alumna, received her doctor's degree in international law from Harvard, where she worked under George Grafton Wilson. In 1933, she had the unusual honor of lecturing on international law at The Hague Academy, one of the few women ever invited to speak there on that subject.

For two years, Dr. Reid held the Carnegie Fellowship of international law and is the first woman to hold the Pennfield Traveling Fellowship from the University of Pennsylvania.

In addition, she won the prize offered by the Buffalo League of Women Voters for her Survey of Civil Service in that city and is an officer of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs. She is at present on leave from her position as professor of political science at the University of Buffalo.

First Dance Tonight

The Catholic Students Mission Crusade will hold their first dance in honor of investiture of officers at St. Patrick's Academy tonight from 9 to 12.

The Living Traps

Beware of traps, and don't forget,
For unsuspecting feet they're set.
—Old Mother Nature.

Sue and Sammy were looking at the first pitcher plants they ever had seen. Each of those odd leaves shaped something like a pitcher without a handle was filled with water. It seemed doubly strange because the plants were growing in a wet boggy place and it just didn't seem possible that they could have need of that water.

"What do they need it for?" asked Sue.

Farmer Brown's boy, who had led them to those plants, chuckled. "To make insect soup I guess," he said.

Sue made face at him. "Stop teasing us, Tommy Brown, and tell us what you mean," she demanded.

"You can't make soup without water, can you?" replied Tommy.

"Of course not," replied Sue.

Tommy picked one of the leaves and held it for the others to peek into. "Isn't that insect soup?" he asked.

Sue stamped a foot. "Stop teasing us" said she. "Stop teasing and tell us what you mean."

"Don't you see all those insects in there?" asked Tommy.

"Of course we see them. The poor things have fallen in there and drowned. What of it?" replied Sue.

Tommy shook his head. "They didn't fall in," said he. "They went in of their own accord."

"What for?" Sammy wanted to know.

"There is something in there that attracted them, a sweet juice or something of the kind. They went in after it and couldn't get out. There is one trying to crawl out now and can't."

"Why can't it?" asked Sammy, looking puzzled.

"Use your eyes, Sammy. Don't you see all those stiff little hairs all pointing down? They keep an insect from crawling back up. After a while it falls in the water and I suppose is drowned. There goes that one now!" replied Tommy.

"I think it is dreadful and I don't see what it is all for," said Sue.

"The plant lives in part on insects. Look in there and see how the lower part is packed with what remains of insects that have been caught. I guess the plant sort of drinks the water and so lives on the insects that way. That is what I mean when I called it insect soup," explained Tommy. "Those leaves are living traps."

Tommy pointed to a "No Trespassing" sign

"Doesn't the plant have roots?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Sure," replied Tommy. "It grows the same as other plants. I guess the insect soup is just something extra."

Sue made a face. "It is wonderful but I don't think I like the idea. It doesn't seem right for a plant to do a thing like that," said she.

"There are different kinds of pitcher plants," said Tommy. "I know a man who sent away and got several kinds and had them growing side by side. Some were more like vases than pitchers and were quite tall. I went to see them. When I looked in them I found that although they were side by side, as I have said, each kind was catching a different kind of insect from the others. I suppose each kind of plant had its own special kind of bait. I don't see that it is any worse for a plant to catch insects than for a bird to do so. We wouldn't have any of these pitcher plants left if it wasn't for that sign over there." Tommy pointed to a "No Tresspassing" sign. "We had to put that sign up to keep people from taking all these plants. People just pulled them up by the roots. I don't know why folks do things like that, or why they pick a lot of flowers, such as buttercups and daisies, because there is so many of them. They are weeds anyway, even if they are pretty. But some kind of flowers shouldn't be picked."

Landon Holds Fascism Issue In 2 Elections

Says Voters Face Choice Central Rule Assailed New Deal's Cost Hit

By the Associated Press.

Bartlesville, Okla., Oct. 31.—Alf M. Landon said tonight the country must decide in its next two elections "whether we are going to be a democracy or a Fascist state."

"We cannot vest too much power in a few individuals as we have now and remain a representative democracy," said Landon in an address for delivery at a campaign rally. "We cannot transfer this power to government and last long as a democracy."

The former Kansas Governor assailed the Administration's "failure" to remedy the country's economic ills, though it "has had the most complete control over Congress and the 48 States of any party in our history."

Landon urged Oklahomans to support Harry O. Glasser, Republican nominee for the Senate, and A. M. Armstrong, Republican nominee for Congress in the First District.

"The greatest weakness in the fiscal policies of the Administration lies in the failure to bring home to the American people the cost of their Federal Government," Landon said.

He asserted the Government now is spending two dollars for every dollar of income and "the discouraging thing to business is there seems to be no stopping place."

"We can experiment with a new farm act every year," he said. "It may be fatal to individual farmers in the end, and while the experimenting is going on, it is something of a brake on general recovery. But careless experimenting with a nation's fiscal policy is as fatal as a careless financial policy is fatal for the individual."

Congressmen, Senators and the President should not be blamed, however, he said, "unless we are willing to voice our protest by voting against them."

Doctor's Hospital To Stress Speed

Each room in the new Doctor's Hospital will be equipped with a two-way communications system providing rapid calls between patients and nurses, officials announced yesterday. Ground for the hospital will be broken November 15.

A special communications system will be established in the obstetrical department and delivery room. A foot-operated emergency call button will be used in the delivery room. The button will ring a bell at the obstetric nurse's station, light a corridome over the delivery room door, sound a buzzer, and light a lamp at the nurse's annunciator.

Also to be installed in the hospital is a pneumatic tube system, similar to those in use in department stores.

SEC Proposes Central Bank For Brokers

For All Public's Funds N. Y. Exchange Agrees Sequel to Whitney Case

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Exchange Commission and the New York Stock Exchange initiated far-reaching steps yesterday to protect the money and securities entrusted by the public to securities brokers.

William O. Douglas, SEC chairman, told reporters the regulations resulted from the investigation of the financial failure of Richard Whitney, former New York Stock Exchange president. Whitney subsequently was convicted of misappropriation of securities belonging to customers.

Would Segregate Funds

Douglas said his goal—to be sought by Congressional legislation if not attained sooner by voluntary action—was the creation of special banks in which to segregate all the money and securities now held by brokers for the public and in which to concentrate the lending involved in margin trading.

As a "first step" toward this goal, Douglas said, the New York Stock Exchange proposes to create a voluntary depository in which members may deposit customers' securities. Services of the depository will be optional to members at first in order to give them time to adjust themselves to the new method of doing business.

Douglas presented a copy of the report to President Roosevelt at a conference attended by Secretary Wallace.

The latter told reporters they discussed the possibility of applying the principles to commodity exchanges. He did not amplify this point.

Provisions Disclosed

The new stock exchange program, adopted October 26, but kept secret until today, provides:

Effective January 1, no member firm will be permitted to owe more than 15 times its net capital, excluding underwriting capital. The present limit, although figured on a different basis, amounts to 20 times.

No official of the exchange shall make or receive a loan from any member or member firm without permission of the exchange's committee on member firms, unless the loan is fully secured or is made by or to the exchange official by a firm of which he is also a member.

No exchange official shall participate in any investigation in which he is financially interested.

More extensive financial statements will be required of members.

Firms doing business with the public must have their books audited at least once a year by independent public accountants.

The exchange will make more frequent and intensive checkups on the books of members.

Members must report to the exchange any loan in excess of $2,500 unless it is fully secured, or in certain other circumstances.

Effective April 1, 1939, no member firm, or its general partners (does not apply to special partners or employes), which carries margin accounts for the public may buy or sell securities on margin for their own accounts.

No member firm may carry an account for a general partner of another firm unless a second general partner of the other firm gives written consent.

No member doing business as an individual (as distinguished from a partnership) may carry securities accounts for customers.

More intensive control will be imposed on customers' men and other employes of members.

The exchange will supervise business practices of members more closely and impose heavier penalties for violations.

Each member firm must report to the exchange weekly its obligations in underwriting transactions.

The exchange will set up a central securities depository in which all securities belonging to the public but left in the hands of exchange members may be segregated and protected.

Capital to Open Public Forum's Fifth Season With Debate at Town Hall November 13

The Town Hall of Washington will inaugurate its fifth season Sunday, November 13, at the Shoreham with a debate by Harold J. Laski, British economist, and Sir Wilmot Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times, on "The Betrayal of Democracy."

Town Hall sessions will be held Sundays at 8 p. m. at the Shoreham. Topics will include peace and war, liberalism and education, fascism and nazism, democracy, government and politics.

The second program, November 20, will be a debate between Bruce Bliven, editor of the New Republic, and Lewis Mumford, author and authority on problems of urban democracy, on "How to Fight Fascism."

"Economic Causes of War" will be debated December 4 by Sir George Paish, London economist and adviser to the chancellor of the exchequer, and George Soule, editor and lecturer at Yale and Columbia.

Paul Van Zeeland, former prime minister of Belgium, will speak December 11 on "How Can International Disorganization Be Remedied?" The following week Representative Dies, of Texas, chairman of the House Committee on un-American Activities, and Gerhart Seger, former member of the German Reichstag, who escaped from a Nazi concentration camp, will discuss "Nazi Propaganda in the United States."

"The Crisis in Liberal Education" will be explained January 8 by Stringfellow Barr, president of St. John's College, Annapolis, and exponent of the classic revival in education. The next week's speaker will be Lord Strabolgi, chief whip of the opposition, British House of Lords, and naval power authority. His topic will be "Eight to One on Peace."

Chairman Hamilton of the Republic on National Committee will discuss the "Future of the Two-Party System in the United States" January 22. He will be followed by Maurice Hindus, author and authority on Soviet Russia, who will talk on "What Next for Europe."

Nicholas Roosevelt, former minister to Hungary and editorial writer for the New York Herald Tribune, and William Yandell Elliott, head of Harvard University's department of government, will debate February 5 on "Should the Government Assume the Role of Senior Partner in Business?"

"What Is A Liberal?" will be argued February 12 by Archibald MacLeish, winner of the Pulitzer prize for poetry, and Max Lerner, Williams College professor and editor of The Nation. A program is planned also for February 19.

GILT OFF THE DOME: Some of the State Department wits want to hire a full-time psychiatrist to help write notes to the dictators . . . Ever since Adolph Berle, the psychic undersec, wrote a note or two based on the assumption that from midnight till noon Hitler thinks he's a Nietzschean superman.

Mrs. Burke . . . protested

But the note reached him between noon and midnight, when he thinks he's Napoleon; it's subtle purpose went slightly askew, and they're leary of amateurs, for the moment.

POTOMAC MEDLEY: If a Representative's clerk dies, the family gets six months' salary and $250 for a funeral; but a Senator's clerk's family gets only the six months salary; no $250 . . . Pictures of Gov. Gen. McNutt dancing in the Philippines with a Russo-German princess with his shirt-tail-out costume are interpreted here (1) as a sign he's overconfident about 1940, or (2) that he's no longer interested in the Presidency.

Those stalwart Senate adversaries, Schwellenbach of Washington and Burke of Nebraska, who kept getting into each others hair last session, got quite chummy in Europe this summer, and on their way home they were inseparable shuffleboard players on the sport deck . . .

But Senator Burke got more fun knocking Schwellenbach's disks off the markers than scoring himself. Finally Mrs. Burke protested.

"Now Ed!" she said. "Why do you always spend your time trying to knock the others out? Why don't you try to get in yourself?"

So far, in New York's preview of the 1940 election shindig, someone (surely not a Republican!) has thrown the Poles and Ukrainians against the Democrats as shock-troops, with the grievance that they haven't had enough State jobs. Others in reserve with the same grievance are the Afghans, Kazaks and Republicans.

One is Archie, son of the great Teddy; the other is George Emlen, of another branch of the Roosevelt klan . . .

Of the 10 Roosevelts in the book, only Jimmy is listed as a Democrat; though there's fairly strong implication that his parents are Democrats, too.

One of the German diplomats in this Capital, who spent the summer in Germany, observes with some pathos, in a manner calculated to touch the heart, that he saw scores of Americans there driving in cars with American flags on the hood, or in their lapels.

"What sort of treatment," he asks, "would German tourists here receive if they flew the Nazi flag?"

Well, his guess is as good as anybody's.

That feverish, ferret-like zeal with which Tom Dewey is going after Gov. Lehman and the New York governorship spotlights the prosecutor in politics. Do men who act like that become prosecutors, or do prosecutors tend to act like that? Congress is full of former prosecutors, former county attorneys, former district attorneys. There seems to be a touch of the Javert in 'em. They convict a murderer or a batch of racketeers and presto, they become statesmen.

There are two schools of thought, on election eve; one is that there are too many prosecutors in Congress; the other, that there aren't enough prosecutors in the White House.

U. S. to Pay Closed Banks $1,000,000

2 Here Win Suit Return on Bonds Were Sold Illegally $150,000 Dividend

Three Government agencies were ordered by the Court of Appeals yesterday to repay $1,000,000 to the District National Bank and the Commercial Bank, both closed.

Some $150,000 of the money will reach the depositors, 85 per cent of it being returned to the Government on its claims as a general creditor.

Bonds Were Sold

Ordered to pay the money were the Panama Canal purchasing officer, $607,000; the Inland Waterways corporation, $200,000, and the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation, $175,000. About $210,000 of it goes to the District bank, the remainder to the Commercial bank.

Justus Wardell, receiver for the District bank, and Cary A. Hardee, receiver for the Commercial bank, sued the Government agencies. They told the court that the money was deposited and that the banks put up bonds to secure the accounts. After the banks closed the Government agencies claimed these bonds and sold some of them.

The receivers claimed that the pledging of the bonds was void because it was against the law. Chief Justice Groner agreed, saying that "while the pledge was made and taken in good faith, it violated the provisions of the national banking act designed to secure uniformity in the treatment of depositors."

The chief justice said not all money of which the Government is the ultimate owner is "public money" entitled to preference when placed in banks. The agencies, he held, were corporations and not entitled to this favor.

The decision leaves the agencies entitled only to the same proportionate share as other creditors, which gives them 85 per cent of the total.

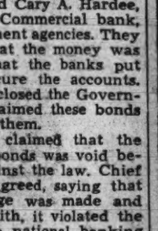
James M. Griffin, In Geodetic Survey 42 Years, Retires

James M. Griffin, 1340 Gallatin street northwest, disbursing agent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Department of Commerce, retired yesterday after more than 42 years of service.



GRIFFIN

Griffin, a native of Atlanta, joined the Survey in 1896 when it was a branchr of the Treasury, and after a career, which included work in the Coast Pilot, engraving and hydrographical divisions, became disbursing agent in 1913, a position also held by his father at one time.

To mark his long service, Griffin was presented with an automobile radio and hand-tooled leather-covered brochure by Director Leo Otis Gilbert, on behalf of the employees. The brochure, illustrated with a series of sketches of amusing incidents occuring during Griffin's tenure of office, is signed by all members of the survey in the United States and possessions.

Boy, 11, Killed 3 Children Hurt In Traffic Mishaps

Bernard P. Randolph, 11, was fatally injured last night by a hit-run car on Carmody road near his home in Carmody Hills, Md. The boy died at Providence Hospital shortly after he was admitted with severe head injuries. Police later arrested the driver on an open charge.

Three other children injured by automobiles on Washington streets were admitted to hospitals with head injuries. They were George C. Gillis, colored, 9, 1106 O street; Sylvia Jackson, colored, 3, 1106 Sixth street northwest, and Harvey Satterfield, colored, 9, 305 New York avenue northwest.

Prepared for Congress Taxpayers Approve It Rap Operating Increase

Budget Bureau officials this morning will begin hearings with District heads to whip the 1940 budget into shape for Congress.

A total bill for $50,383,937 was submitted by the District Commissioners last Saturday to finance municipal operations for the 1940 fiscal year.

Meanwhile the Washington Taxpayers Association responded to the announcement of the budget estimate with this statement:

"The proposed Commissioners' budget makes pretty good reading for the taxpayers of Washington. If enacted, it will at least mean no increased taxation next year.

"However, an examination of the budget figures released Sunday shows that the uptrend in the operating costs of the District government will continue. While the proposed budget boosts amount to but $822,884, this comparatively small addition to the total is due almost entirely to a decrease in highway and capital expenditures."

Jones, had served six years on the squad.

Pickets Lose Free Speech Appeal Here

Embassy Arrests Upheld Precincts Inviolate In 'Law of Nations'

The constitutional right of free speech does not include demonstrations near embassies which are intended to discredit or ridicule foreign diplomats, the District Court of Appeals ruled yesterday in affirming the conviction of four persons who picketed the German Embassy last March.

District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Hart were upheld in their contention that Congress had power to limit such picketing under its authority to define and punish offenses against the law of nations. Congress, in fact, had a duty to do so, the court said, quoting President Fillmore's message of 1851, "Ambassadors, public ministers and consuls . . . are objects of especial respect and protection, each according to the rights belonging to his rank and station."

To bar pickets from within 500 feet of an embassy, Chief Justice Groner argued, "places no restriction upon speech or assembly except to the extent that they may constitute offensive public demonstrations calculated to arouse passions and resentment in those governments with which we have relations."

The Chief Justice pointed out that even this conduct was forbidden only when it was on the streets "immediately adjacent" to diplomatic establishments.

The demonstrators contended that the act was void because no standards were laid down to guide the police in granting permits for picketing. They said this was an invalid delegation of power. The court, however, decided that since Congress might forbid the picketing altogether it might—instead of doing so—leave to the police the question of issuing permits.

The Chief Justice recalled that laws against speeches in parks without permits, against hanging awnings without permits and against unlicensed street meetings all had been held constitutional.

Frederick A. Ballard and Howard C. Westwood appeared for the demonstrators.

Willett Lauds Democracy of Chest Method

Contributors Have Choice Defends Private Charity May Name Beneficiary

The Community Chest is democratic in that contributors may name the channel through which they wish to have their donation used, Herbert L. Willett, jr., director declared last night.

Speaking before 65 volunteer members of the Governmental Unit Speakers' Committee, Willett said the private agencies of the Chest help desperate families, the sick, and the aged, in specialized ways that public relief agencies cannot hope to undertake.

"The private family welfare agencies deal with the problem of keeping individual families from going on the rocks," Willett stated. "The cost of holding the family together is far less than the cost of allowing it to break up and become dependent. And the advantage to the community as well as to the family is obvious."

The Chest is the channel through which citizens of Washington can make their gifts in the most economical and efficient way to the private welfare agencies they prefer to support, Willett said.

Had 'Good Time' for 4 Weeks In D. C. Jail, Artist Avers

ALBRITTON

"I met some interesting people," he said. "In fact, I had to go to jail to realize how many crazy people there are in the world."

Holding up a dog-eared copy of "Gone With the Wind," he added: "I have been reading this book. After I had finished 700 pages of it the title reminded me of fresh air."

Charles H. Quimby 3d, and John R. Fletcher, Albritton's attorneys, obtained from Justice Oscar R. Luhring of the District Supreme Court an order releasing their client after they had surrendered the child to Mrs. Norella Albritton, the mother.

Albritton was committed on October 3 for failure to comply with the order granting the mother custody. At a hearing last Wednesday, Justice Luhring held him in contempt of court because the child was not in the mother's custody and directed that he should remain in jail until the order had been obeyed.

Puzzled and making no effort to conceal his belligerent reaction to all the fuss, Zelner J. Albritton, jr., object of the dispute, was brought to the law offices of William A. Gallagher, Columbian building, attorney for Mrs. Albritton.

His mother, sad-eyed and reserved had arrived some minutes before. When the youngster was brought in she rushed forward and took him in her arms.

Albritton was still reading "Gone With the Wind" when his attorneys called at the courthouse cell with the release order.

Last November Mrs. Albritton filed for separate maintenance and custody of the child. The couple are not divorced. Custody was granted the mother temporarily pending settlement.

Seal Studies ABC Policy On Retailers

Long Hearing Held Change Discussed Wholesalers Argue Offutt Asks Advice

Legality of a 3-year-old policy of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board—that of refusing transfer or renewal of licenses to retailers owing liquor bills to wholesalers—will be studied today by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

Following a lengthy public hearing yesterday when the A. B. C. board heard testimony from retailers and wholesalers on a proposal to change the policy, George W. Offutt, chairman, said he would refer the entire question to Seal.

Appearing before the board for the Wholesale Liquor Dealers of Washington, Milford F. Schwartz said the present procedure was desired by the public at large and the liquor industry.

For the last three years, whenever a retailer has been known to be in arrears in payments to wholesalers, the A. B. C. board has refused to approve transfer of his license or its renewal until his bills were paid.

Under section 28 of the liquor code, whenever a retailer is in arrears on his bills to a wholesaler, he is required to pay cash until his bills are paid in full.

The procedure in question is not on the books but has formed a part of the policy of the board. Recently, the board decided it would drop the policy and would issue license transfers and renewal licenses even to retailer in arrears.

Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney for the District, representing 95 per cent of the wholesale distributors of beer said the public would lose by the change and that the retail liquor dealer would benefit.

Snakes, Baboons Worry Airport, But They're Mice

Considerable excitement prevailed at the District airport last night when a report was circulated that Armand Denis, Belgian explorer, was arriving on a plane from New York, bringing with him his family and menagèria of snakes, wild fowl and baboons.

It was no Halloween joke. The Denis family arrived all right, but all they brought were two white mice.

Denis said the children wanted to bring with them their "pets," consisting of a silver monkey, baboons and snakes, but that airline regulations would not permit.

The family consisted of Denis, Leila Roosevelt, second cousin of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, his wife; their twin boys, Armand and David, 11; Renee, 10, and Heidi Ann, 6.

The children, Denis explained, are being taken on a tour of the country by air. Although they have been around the world, it was the first time they had been on a plane.

Music-Box War Taken to Court As Employer Sues Salesman

The abundance and distribution of music boxes were made judicial matters yesterday in Ira T. Byram, who does business as the Silent Sales System, 1928 Fourteenth street northwest.

Byram complained about John V. del Vecchio, of 41 Randolph place northwest. He explained that his business was "leasing and renting automatic music machines, pin games and coin-operated amusement machine games "and that August 30 he hired del Vecchio to sell his devices. Appending a signed contract to prove it, Byram said del Vecchio promised faithfully not to quit and go in business for himself.

Nevertheless, the complaint said, the salesman did just that and now Byram's music box—the kind you drop a nickel into and "Martha" comes out—has been removed from the business place of one of Byram's "very best customers" and a new kind put in.

What's more, said Byram, del Vecchio has 20 more brand new music boxes and unless the court does something about it he will install them in various places around town.

The plaintiff asked for a restraining order and a pre-injunction.

They'll Make a President Of Gary Cooper Yet!

Wanted for Both Washington and Lincoln
Father Flanagan Writes a Letter
Current Happenings in the Theater

A DRIVE seems to be on to make Presidential timber of Gary Cooper.

When Frank Capra, one of the foremost motion picture directors in the industry, paid his recent visit to Washington, he stated in hearing of this column that when, as and if he ever undertakes a film version of Maxwell Anderson's play of "Valley Forge" his choice for the role of George Washington would be Gary Cooper. Now comes Samuel Goldwyn with similar enthusiasms over Mr. Cooper as the only Hollywood actor ideally suited to assume the role of Abraham Lincoln in a contemplated picturization of Robert E. Sherwood's current Broadway success of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois"—given its premiere recently in the National Theater, prior to the New York triumph.

BELL

Two recognized authorities on the life and character of Abraham Lincoln, it appears, have wired Mr. Goldwyn their approval of his plan to cast Mr. Cooper as the Great Emancipator in a film to be made from the Sherwood drama. The two telegrams were from Emanuel Hertz, author of "Abraham Lincoln, a New Portrait" and "The Hidden Lincoln from the Letters and Papers of William H. Hearndon," and Lin Price, president of the Illinois Association of Southern California, representing 400,000 Illinoisians now living in the Golden State.

Mr. Hertz's communication had this, in part, to say: "Gary Cooper's long study and knowledge of the Great Liberator has almost consecrated him for the task. Appearance and sound acting talent and his will to re-create Lincoln are indispensable qualifications. There is no other screen star so well qualified for this crowning adventure. I think Gary Cooper as Lincoln is as inspired as it is inevitable."

And from Mr. Price: "As president of the Illinois Association of Southern California, it has been brought to my attention that certain of the film companies are contemplating production of a film about Abraham Lincoln, Illinois' greatest citizen. We 400,000 Illinoisians in California, who now outnumber Iowans in this State, feel that an outstanding film personality, eminently suited in appearance and character to portray the role of that illustrious Illinoisian, is Gary Cooper. And I, as president, hope that Hollywood will not attempt to cast a matinee-idol type in the role of the Great Emancipator. Any film which shows Abraham Lincoln's life is not merely a piece of entertainment in celluloid. It should be a document of importance not only to Illinois and California, but to the entire world in these troubled days when Lincoln's ideals of freedom and democracy should be broadcast to the four corners of the globe."

As was contended by this department from the outset, and as has since been conclusively proven, the ideal selection for the role of Lincoln was, and is, Raymond Massey, whose superb performance in the Sherwood stage play seems destined to go down in the history of the theater as one of the classics of the American stage. However, since Mr. Massey's services no doubt will be required on the stage long past the time when the film play will be produced, Hollywood, perforce, must content itself with the "next best." That very possibly might be Gary Cooper.

One thing, nevertheless, is certain. Whoever follows Raymond Massey in the part will suffer under the handicap of having to match a portrayal of unparalleled dignity, kindliness and power—a perfect embodiment of a great figure in history such as comes along only once in a lifetime in the theater.

Speaking of dignity, kindliness and power, Joseph P. Tumulty's address at the Halloween luncheon of the Washington Variety Club in compliment to its feminine membership, yesterday at the Willard, was a masterpiece of eloquent tribute to the charitable and humanitarian impulses to which the showmen's organization is dedicated. The profound wisdom of Mr. Tumulty's remarks moved one of the largest luncheon attendances in the history of the club to a volume of sustained applause that amounted to a spontaneous and prolonged ovation.

Also present, from the local theaters, were Eleanore Whitney, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle, and the Frazee Sisters, George Beatty and Burrus Williams, from the Capitol. The Frazee Sisters and Mr. Beatty, with Mr. Williams at the piano, scored enormously in songs and anecdotes, culled from their current acts. Miss Whitney was compelled to leave early by the drastic demands of a five-show schedule of performances. Attorney Alvin Newmyer and Dr. Archie Engel, "kings for the day," are to be congratulated upon the character of the program they provided—and Barker Harry E. Somerville for the skill of his chefs.

From Father Flanagan's Boys Home, Boys Town, Nebr., under date of October 29:

"My Dear Mr. Bell: Through our good friend, Miss Sibyl Bowan, I have received an article you wrote on the 'Boys Town' picture and I want to thank you from the very bottom of my heart for this wonderful article and your great interest in Boys Town.

"The picture is so very fine and we are happy it has been made; however, we did not expect such a reaction as far as our finances were concerned. I might say that our contributions have fallen dowrn almost to nothing during the past few weeks—everyone seems to be under the impression that Hollywood has made us so very wealthy. I am sure, though, that we will make many new friends through this picture and in time much good will come from it. All we received was the $5,000 offered us by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the use of our grounds and name, but this is in accordance with their contract, and it was a gamble on their part when they started out, so no one can complain.

"It is nice to know the reaction of the many writers who have given this picture and our work such fine publicity—and I am grateful to everyone who has helped in any way. Without such men as you and your opinions, this work, or any work, could not go very far and I appreciate more and more every day the great service the newspaper renders to everyone, and particularly to worthy enterprises.

"Thanking you again and wishing you continued success in your fine work, I remain, dear Mr. Bell, Gratefully yours, (Signed) REV. E. J. FLANAGAN."

If this column, in any small way, has aided the splendid work Father Flanagan is doing in the face of discouraging difficulties, it is as happy and grateful as he. It is to that great-hearted artiste, Sibyl Bowan, however, that chief credit is due for having made it possible to reproduce here an earlier letter to her from Father Flanagan.

In ringing twice yesterday, the postman was of great help on a busy Monday. He poked another letter through the slot from Lou Smith, coproducer of Frank Lloyd's film version for Paramount of Justin Huntly McCarthy's "If I Were King," coming soon to Loew's Palace, with Ronald Colman starred in the role of the vagabond poet, Francois Villon. In addition to pleasant remarks concerning his recent hurried visit to Washington for the press preview of the picture, Lou drops a bit of news. He will be back in the Capital about the middle of November in company with Frank Lloyd for purposes of a little research at the Smithsonian. One of motion pictures' most distinguished directors, Mr. Lloyd will be an interesting and informative visitor—he has been making pictures since goodness knows when and has some of the most imposing productions in the history of the cinema to his credit.

Air Attaches, representing foreign countries through the embassies and legations in Washington, joined Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of aviation, U. S. Army, at a special screening of "Men With Wings," in the Warner Brothers' private projection room in the Earle Theater Building last Friday night. These aviation experts expressed approval of the Paramount picture, which is a cavalcade of aviation history from the time of the Wright Brothers to the present-day clipper ships.

Among those present were Senor Ricardo J. Siri, secretary of the Argentine Embassy; Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher, military and air attache, Germany; Senor and Mme. Dr. Don Rafael Fuentes, secretary of the Mexican Embassy; Mr. Laurence Bargardenu, attache for Rumania; Mr. Constantine A. Oumansky, counselor, U. S. S. R.; Capt. Barasua, Chilean Embassy; Dr. Marshall M. Merritt, Argentine Embassy, and William Briggs, Eastern Air Lines.

"Men With Wings" opens on the screne at the Earle Theater this Friday. It is photographed entirely in Technicolor—the first time this medium has been taken into the high altitudes here and the stratosphere.

In response to many inquiries, the current engagement of grand opera at the Belasco marks only a single week's interruption of the Lafayette Square theater's motion picture policy. Acceding to numerous requests, the management is bringing back "Grand Illusion," for one week only, beginning Monday, November 7. According to present plans, it will be followed by "Peg of Old Drury." So now you know.

GEORGE OLSEN, the band leader, and his wife, Ethel Shutta—who announced their divorce plans the other day—will work together, for the first time in years, this week at the Stanley Theater in Pittsburgh . . . Clyde Pangborn has developed, with the backing of Sir Cunliffe Owen, a 100-passenger plane for transatlantic service next summer . . . The runaway grand jury in Brooklyn will conclude its services Monday and deliver its presentments. It will make recommendations regarding a cleanup in that borough.

DR. ROY ALLAN DAFOE met Prof. Albert Einstein Saturday night, and both walked to a corner of the room . . . Dafoe offered his hand. "I'm afraid to take it," said Einstein. "With your hands—anything is liable to happen" . . . Dr. Dafoe then told him some incidents regarding the Dionne quintuplets . . . "Five of them, Dr. Einstein," said Dafoe . . . "Five?" repeated the world's greatest mathematician. "One, two, three, four, five? How wonderful!"

JOHN STRACHEY, who temporarily has been admitted into this country, will write an article for the New Yorker magazine describing his experiences on Ellis Island . . . The Times refused the ad for "The Story of a Cheat," because of its gay wordage. The Herald Tribune, however, accepted it . . . The film studios again are luring Jerome Weidman, who has repeated with another best seller, "What's In It For Me?"—a masterful job.

RECENTLY IT WAS reported here, and confirmed by the newspapers later, that Mrs. Burleigh Grimes, wife of the Dodgers' former manager, would apply to a charitable organization for food and shelter. This is the rest of the story . . . Mrs. Grimes did apply—and was turned down because she couldn't pay the small food charge in advance . . . The daughter of the owner of Ebbets Field is temporarily providing for Mrs. Grimes' needs. Ford Frick has promised to aid.

THE LONDON EXPRESS' famed black mirror facade is no more. During the recent war scare the building was painted to remove the sheen, to make it a less obvious target. The editors were measured for asbestos suits and preparations were made to put out the paper in the bomb-proof sub-basement . . . Marc Blitzstein is a patient at Mount Sinai Hospital and commutes to rehearsals of "Danton," for which he has written the music . . . Jimmy Durante, now at the Chez Paree, will get a master's degree from Chicago's Columbia College of Drama. He never went to grammar school.

A MORSING newspaper has engaged the Crosley Co. to conduct a straw vote of the N. Y. gubernatorial campaign . . . Payment for this poll service will be based upon unusual arrangements . . . If the poll proves to be accurate and is in accord with the recorded vote, Crosley will be paid $12,000 . . . If there is a difference between the poll and the actual vote, the fee will be reduced proportionately—depending upon the percentage of difference.

STERLING NORTH, the book reviewer, attended the party given last week for the publication of "Their Majesties," the merry-go-round book about royalty. "But where are the Romanoffs?" North demanded, and accidentally pushed a strange lady near him—the Grand Duchess Marie . . . King Lucas of Father Divine's Heaven will conduct the Westchester Club Band at Hunt Point Community Center tonight. His slogan is "Swing, It's Wonderful." . . . Stanley High, who just returned from Europe, spent a week-end at Lady Astor's Cliveden estate and will write an article about the Cliveden Set for a national magazine.

SCRIBNER'S will publish Robert Sherwood's hit play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." It will have a 10,000-word preface by the author . . . Frank Shields, the night-club slugger, now enters all cafes with his hands clutched tightly in his pants pockets . . . The Paramount wants Jimmy Lunceford's band if he can get time off from the Kit Kat Klub . . . Main Events, the C. C. N. Y. newspaper, wasn't published last week because the printer censored it. The edition was to feature quotations from "Mexican Love," the hot book written by Dean Justin H. Moore of that school.

Universal Starts Five Big Pictures During October

Universal studios will place five of the largest pictures of its year's schedule in production this month.

Three of these productions will be produced by Joe Pasternak. The first, "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," starring Deanna Durbin, will be directed by Henry Koster, who directed her in "Three Smart Girls" and "100 Men and a Girl." The script is an original by Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson.

The second will be "Rio," with Danielle Darrieux, who returns from France to make this picture, and possibly one more before she again sails for her homeland. Anatole Litvak, who directed her in "Mayerling," will be at the megaphone.

Pasternak will also produce "Destry Rides Again," a top-budget outdoor picture, starring James Stewart with a strong supporting cast. Much of the picture, it is planned, will be made on locations far from Hollywood.

Rapidly rounding into shape is the screen play on "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," an original by W. C. (Bill) Fields, in which he will star with Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. George Marion, jr., is scripting the comedy.

Bing Crosby will croon for Universal during October. His picture, now in the process of scripting, will be "Three's Company." It will get into production the latter part of the month.

Universal studios is rushing completion of its building program in order to take care of the demand for stage space these pictures will impose. At least two additional stages, the old "Phantom" and Stage D will have been reconditioned and sound-proofed before the heavy production schedule gets under way. Excavations are ready for two brand new, modern air-conditioned stages with actual construction work only a few days away.

New Comedy Relights the National

'Yankee Fable' Arrives
Ina Claire Starred
Is Colonial Episode

By Nelson B. Bell

"YANKEE FABLE." Cheryl Crawford presents Ina Claire in a new comedy in three acts by Lewis Meltzer. Staged by Otto L. Preminger; setting by Harry Horner. At the National Theater.

THE CAST

Jeremiah Trumbull.....Robert Pitkin
David Cooper.....Barry Sullivan
Luke Rutledge.....Robert Strauss
Asa.....Maynard Holmes
Sydney.....Hillis Mitchell
Mary Page.....Maxine Stuart
Susan Rutledge.....Eda Heinemann
Mrs. Lorinda Bleeker.....Ina Claire
Maj. Creel.....John Williams
Sergt. Hornish.....Ralph Sumpter
Gen. Sir William Howe...Henry Daniell
Col. Timothy Bleeker...William Brisbane
Sergt. Malleson.....William Haskell
Soldiers, Joe Banner, Warren Young, Trumbull Barton.

It is a high compliment that Mr. Lewis Meltzer has paid Miss Ina Claire in his new three-act comedy of "Yankee Fable." Mr. Meltzer seems to have been of the view that the shortcomings of a loosely knit and sketchy play would be obscured by the native beauty, wit and charm of the most brilliant and most vivacious of the theater's comediennes. While this, in a measure, is true, even the superlative talents of so gifted an actress find it difficult to create the impression that here is a drama worthy of its star.

In fabricating the three acts of his fabled incident in the progress of the Revolutionary War, the author has seriously slighted the important matters of substantial character building and the contrivance of convincing situations. His pattern is that of the fast-moving and flippant farce, rather than the more orderly design of a romantic comedy involving historical figures in an episode that played a part in the destiny of nations out of all proportion to its seeming importance. The result is an ambitious enterprise that falls short of its goal, despite frequent intervals of delightful comedy and an occasional period of warmth and honesty in the exposition of a sound philosophy of war and love.

The General Relaxes

The developments of "Yankee Fable" all revolve around the detention of Gen. Sir William Howe, commander of the British forces in New York, in the home of Mrs. Lorinda Bleeker, while Gen. Putnam's forces fire the winter headquarters of the English and join Gen. Washington on the heights of Harlem to make their stand against the enemy. The single scene of the play is the drawing room of Col. and Mrs. Timothy Bleeker on Murray Hill.

It is here that Gen. Howe betrays his susceptibility to a pretty face, an impertinent faminine wit and the promise of a clandestine peccadillo with the wife of the Tory whom he has eleveated to a colonelcy with the inspired foresight of a born philanderer. There is piquancy and humor in much that transpires here in a single day. There is also a definite absence of those qualities of depth and believability needed to lend the play the impressiveness of thoughtful preparation and the benefit of expository as well as climatic writing.

There are, of course, the expected corollaries of a seconday love interest and the British search for Rebel spies to run parallel to the major theme of the pretty war of wits between Lorinda Bleeker and Gen. Howe, but these add little to the substance of the play.

Star Shines Brightly

Miss Claire's impersonation of the scheming young matron whose pretense extended beyond the boundaries of a mere flirtation, needless to say, is buoyant, brittle and crisply amusing, within the comparatively narrow limitations of her role. Her sparkling beauty and richly picturesque colonial costumes lend additional effectiveness to a fascinating individual performance. In the opposite role of Gen. Howe, Henry Daniell, latterly of the films, also acquits himself handsomely as a suave, gentlemanly and usually contradictory war lord, with no enthusiasm for his appointed task, but a vast ardor for the conquest of his hostess. For whatever deficiencies there are in these two pivotal roles, the blame is to be placed at Mr. Meltzer's door, not the players'.

Among the members of the supporting cast, Barry Sullivan, as David Cooper, the impetuous young patriot; John Williams, in the seriocomic role of Maj. Creel, aide and self-appointed mentor to Gen. Howe; Eda Heinemann, the rebellious Susan Rutledge, and William Brisbane, as the fawning and deluded Col. Timothy Bleeker, rendered the most valuable assistance to the star and her leading man.

That those in attendance at the National last night were not unaware that they had enjoyed an agreeable, if imperfect, synopsis of an interesting play was evidenced by six curtain calls at the end of the last act.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct 31.—After a visit to the RKO studio, where I watched Jack Barrymore playing scenes for "The Great Man Votes," I'm willing to go on record as saying that a great many of our people will be voting for both the actor and the picture when those little Academy Oscars are to be handed out again. It's a wonderful story, human and sincere. And how Jack bites into it! He says his only fear is when he has to do scenes with the two kids, Peter Holden and Virginia Weidler.

HEDDA HOPPER

"You can't fake when you're playing with those children," John says. With this one he'll probably end all political pictures, just as he's finished football opuses with "Hold That Co-Ed."

After this, he does "Midnight" with Claudette Colbert. Then the New York play some time in January.

"How about the play?" I asked Jack.

Oh, it's wonderful!" he enthused. "It's about an old ham who's had 12 wives . . . a bit reminiscent, wouldn't you say? And my brood of children keep popping up in the oddest places. Several er-er—I'm quite attracted to." He goes for the best looking one, who stops him by saying: "No, no, daddy, be your age."

He looks at her and says: "Who was your mother?" She tells him. "Oh—yes, I remember her . . . a great horsewoman."

"Elaine plays my oldest daughter," Jack said, "who sticks with me to the end. She's tough, too, just like the old man. And when she goes wild it reminds me where she got it from. At the end of act one I take her over my knee and spank hell out of her."

I remarked: "Can you imagine what a first night audience will do during that scene?"

I was surprised to learn that it's been more than ten years since he has played in New York, the last one being "Hamlet." This new one will be produced by Brock Pemberton, who was Arthur Hopkins' play reader and assistant when Jack made his greatest acting history in "The Resurrection," "The Jest" and "Richard III."

I reminded him I'd seen him in every opening since "Believe Me, Xantippe." He was sweet enough to say I didn't look it. Then he went on: "Well, you remember opening of 'Peter Ibbetson,' Lionel's return to the stage, after he'd spent years in Paris studying to be one of our best etchers. Lionel had an obsession that he couldn't remember lines, which reacted on our nervous system. So during my best scene, I went up in my lines, which were thrown me by Lionel!

"I had to build myself at least four inches higher, and wore that beautiful blond wig."

"You certainly were beautiful," I said.

Without stopping to catch his breath, Jack said: "Yes, wasn't I? As I was leaving the theater after a matinee, Constance Collier said: 'There are two important girls waiting at the stage door for you—now please be nice to them, Jack.'

"You know, Connie got the rights to 'Peter,' translated it and got an angel to produce it, and she played the Duchess of Tower. The least I could do was to carry out her wishes. So I stopped—and one young girl said: 'We'd like to speak to Mr. Barrymore, please.' I am Mr. Barrymore. 'But we'd like to speak to Mr. John Barrymore who plays Peter.' I am Peter. With that they threw up their hands and said: 'Good heavens!' and ran from the theater."

"How about that love scene you did, Jack, with Violet Kemble Cooper in 'Clare de Lune?' "

"Yes, you devil, and every woman in the audience would have paid

Thousands of Merrymakers Witness Gay Halloween Parade

Queen Rides to Reviewing Stand in State

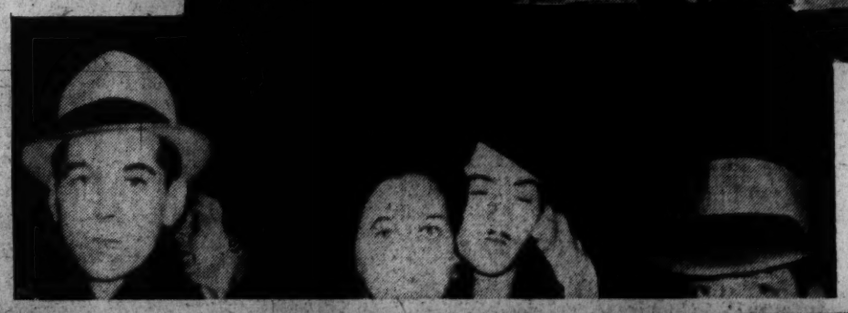
Father Time

Within a half moon, Father Time views with his long telescope Halloween as celebrated in other years. The float was entered by the Community Center Department.

Fearsome Creatures Stalk Capital Streets

This strange creature, a dragon or a caterpillar magnified thousands of times, was one of the beasts entered in the parade by department stores to frighten away unfriendly spirits and thrill the thansands who lined Constitution avenue for the annual renewal of a civic Halloween parade. This scene was made in front of the Queen's reviewing stand. A vantage point was found by Regina Arley in a tree (at right).



A Bison Nods to the Thousands

The National Capital Parks float bore a huge nodding bison in a yellow half moon much like the real moon which cast a light glow over the autumnal scene. There were 2,000 participants in the parade and 12 bands, which thrilled the crowd, estimated at nearly 200,000.

A Gala Occasion for Washington Youngsters

War Admiral 3-5 Choice Over Seabiscuit Today

20 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The scratching of a pen yesterday along the dotted lines of a legal document—Bucky Harris' managerial contract for 1939—laid at rest, finally, one of the wild rumors of the 1938 baseball season.

Fantastic as it was, the report that Joe Cronin, Mickey Cochrane and Bucky Harris would figure in a startling managerial shift, gained some credence. Cronin was supposed to get his discharge at Boston to make room for Cochrane who had already been fired at Detroit. With his son-in-law, Cronin available, Clark Griffith was supposed to turn Bucky Harris out to forage for a new job.

POVICH.

However, the rumor mongers failed to take into account two simple items (1) that Mr. Tom Yawkey, millionaire Boston owner, was completely satisfied with the job that was being turned in by Cronin who led his team into second place with the worst pitching staff in the league, and (2) that Clark Griffith is very fond of Bucky Harris.

Griffith's fondness for Harris did not originate of recent date. It was first played 15 years ago when the Nats' owner braved the critics by making his 26-year-old second baseman—and not such a hot second baseman, at that—the manager of the Washington Club. That was in 1924, and the savants called it "Griffith's Folly."

Within a year, Harris had proved the wisdom of Griffith's choice. He had brought to Washington its first pennant and garnished that feat by winning the world series. And the Old Fox of baseball, long regarded as the shrewdest clubowner in the game, had added one more sprig of laurel to his crown.

"The best manager in baseball from 3 to 5 o'clock." That's what Griffith has often said of Bucky Harris. By that he means not that Harris is no asset when games go into extra innigns, but that once a game starts Harris can get out of his ball team all that is in it. Griffith, frankly, is not struck with Harris' capabilities as a talent scout, but in the Nats' scheme that is not important.

Griff Digs Up Talent

It is not important because Griffith delegates to himself the duties of digging up the Nats' talent, swinging their deals and otherwise arranges the personnel of the club. The players who come under Harris' wing are the contributions of Griffith alone. A Washington manager has very little to do with signing or buying players.

On another club that would not be true, of course. But Washington is a team apart from the rest. Griffith's presence as owner makes it so. Unlike the clubowners of six other teams in the league—Connie Mack is the other exception—Griffith is a baseball man. With him his ball club is not a rich man's hobby or a mere investment. He grew up with the game, virtually teethed on it, and is equipped to administer his office as president in all the duties that the office implies.

Thus Washington managers, unlike managers of most clubs, do not have the same free hand in gathering talent. But in the case of the Washington club that is no handicap, for the Nats' pilots are blessed with the counsel and advice of a man who is fitted to give it. They are relieved of duties saddled on other managers by club owners who are green peas in the business of building ball clubs.

Another thing. The manager who holds down the Washington job has reason to congratulate himself. Because pleasing Griffith is, in one sense, a task. I mean by that, that Griffith is a stern critic for the simple reason that he is close to the game. Another manager might tell his club owner that Joe Kluts can't hit a hard ball high one, or that Butch McGill can't go to his right and thus build up a ready alibi for defeat.

Rehiring Is a Tribute

But the Washington manager can't construct any phoney excuses because Griffith knows his ball players' capabilities. He can't be misled or bamboozled by fast-talking managers who might take advantage of another clubowner's innocence. So whenever Mr. Griffith rehires a manager it is something of a tribute to the latter, to say the least.

Griffith released Harris at the end of the 1928 season, 'tis true, but he always will believe that he had cause. He still admired Harris' managerial ability at that time, but he was aware, too, that Washington fandom suspected that Bucky had gone high hat and was cooling to him. At least the boos of that era indicated as much. And Griffith's first concern, is of course, to his public. And with Walter Johnson available, he was not reluctant to hand Harris over to Detroit.

But seven years later when Joe Cronin's sale to Boston left the Nats managerless, Griffith didn't dally in offering the job to Harris who had been displaced at Boston after he had produced Boston's first first-division club in 17 years. The Old Fox still liked Harris' type of baseball.

With the Nats last season, Harris work was, in many respects, sensational. His fifth-place finish was something of a feat considering his outlandish pitching. But Harris' greatest accomplishment with the Nats was not in finishing fifth. What he did do was to keep a none-too-powerful club high up in the race during those profitable days of April, May, June, July and August. Attendance at Griffith Stadium last season was the greatest in years. The week-end intake, especially, was staggering. Harris, by keeping his club up there, made money for the firm. That fact helped to foretell what happened yesterday.

Lombardi Is 'Most Valuable'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

A baseball player is always a hero to the kids—and more so when he's the most valuable player in the league. Catcher Ernie Lombardi, of the Cincinnati Club, was named most valuable in the National yesterday by the Baseball Writers Association and here he is shown with his most ardent admirers—the gang from the sandlots

Lombardi Rated Tops By Writers

Is Most Valuable Bill Lee Second Vaughan Is Third Ernie's Popular

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 31.—Out of as strong a group of candidates as ever aspired to the honor, Ernie Lombardi today was voted the National League's most valuable player for 1938 by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Although the Cincinnati Reds' classy catcher met stiff opposition from such other valued workmen as Bill Lee, Arky Vaughan and Mel Ott, the 24 members of the writers' voting committee gave him a sizable margin with 229 points under a new scoring system.

Thus Lombardi, the league's batting champion and the best catcher this year, becomes the first Cincinnati performer ever to win the honor.

First on Ten Ballots

He was picked first on 10 of the 24 ballots, a noteworthy vote considering the opposition he faced. The point total for "the Schnozzola" represented an edge of 63 over the second-place 166 for Lee, who pitched the Chicago Cubs into the National League pennant with his 22 wins and his iron-man job of working four days in a row over the final week. Vaughan, hitting leader of Pittsburgh, gave Lee a fight for second place, but missed out by three points, although each was selected for first place on five ballots. Master Mel Ott, the Giants' great little veteran and the loop's runs-batted-in king, took fourth place with 132.

Hitting king of the league with a .342 average, 200-pound Lombardi was the big reason why the Reds wound up in the first division after finishing in the cellar in '37. Although he's slow afoot—he wallops those line drives off the left-field wall and then beats them out for singles—he's an A-1 hitter and far better than a green hand in the mechanics of catching.

Tops as Catcher

Now that Gabby Hartnett is slowing up, there isn't another receiver in the senior circuit who can touch the 30-year-old slugger from Oakland, Calif. His day-by-day play shows all the characteristics a player requires for most-valuable consideration: actual value to his team, both on offense and defense, the number of games played and general character, disposition, loyalty and effort.

In eight years in the big show, since he came up from the Pacific Coast League, he has batted for a neat .320 lifetime average, and in each of the last seven years he has worked in more than 100 games.

He has been with the Reds since 1932. The Dodgers brought him up from the coast and used him in 73 games in '31 before tossing him into a deal at bargain rates when they sent Babe Herman to Cincinnati for Tony Cuccinello.

Lombardi is the first catcher to get the most valuable award in the National since Hartnett was selected in 1935. He succeeds Ducky Medwick, the St. Louis Cardinals' clouting outfielder, who nose-dived to eleventh place.

Brown and McCormick

Lombardi was picked on five ballots for second, three for third and one each for fourth, fifth, sixth and ninth. Although Lee and Vaughan each were selected five times for first place, Lee held the edge over the Pirate shortstop in votes for other positions.

Besides the three leaders, only Ott, Hartnett, Mace Brown, Pittsburgh relief pitcher, and First Baseman Buck McCormick, of the Reds, the league's rookie of the year, received first-place nominations. Each was mentioned once for the top spot.

Ott's fourth-place total of 132 points gave him only a 2-point edge over McCormick, whose surprisingly large 130 aggregate for fifth place came as further definite in-

Hostak Will Fight Kreiger Tonight

Seattle, Oct. 31 (AP).—Seattle's fight fans were virtually certain their favorite son, Al Hostak, still would be wearing his middleweight crown after his 15-round ring engagement tomorrow night with Solly Kreiger of New York, but they were a little nervous about his first title defense scrap.

Hostak will be shooting for his eighteenth straight knockout, but Kreiger never has been knocked out.

At the conclusion of their training grind yesterday Hostak weighed 161 pounds and his opponent 162. Kreiger must hit 160 pounds by the official weigh-in time at 2 p. m. tomorrow to bid for the championship.

Rams and Broncs May Meet Jan. 1 In Charity Game

Los Angeles, Oct. 31 (AP).—Superior Judge Thomas P. White announced today that negotiations are under way for a postseason football game between Santa Clara and Fordham universities, to be played in the Memorial Coliseum here Sunday, January 1.

Judge White said 17 Catholic laymen will meet next Wednesday to discuss the proposal. Tentative plans call for it to be staged as a benefit for the Associated Catholic Charities.

"I do not know what assurance we have that these two teams would be available, but you may say that the movement is definitely under way," the jurist declared.

Stan Harris Will Manage Nats in 1939

Signed Up Yesterday Contract for a Year Griffith Well Pleased Terms Not Revealed

By Shirley Povich.

Clark Griffith yesterday ended all doubt of the identity of the Nats' manager for 1939 by reappointing Stanley Raymond (Bucky) Harris.

Smilingly emerging from a conference with Harris, the Nats' owner announced that the manager's one-year contract had been renewed "at a raise in pay."

"Bucky did a fine job for us last season," said Griffith. "I did not consider making any change in managers."

Baseball critics throughout the league have been unanimous in the opinion that Harris did surprisingly well in landing his collection of athletes in fifth place.

Harris' reappointment marks his fifth consecutive season at the helm of the Nats in his second stretch as the Washington manager. He managed the Nats through 1924-1928, inclusive, returning here in 1935 after serving at Detroit and Boston.

Fr. Sheehy Toted Linesman's Stick For Notre Dame

Unknown to 80,000 football fans at Yankee Stadium the headlinesman's stick denoting the number of the down in the Army-Notre Dame game was in distinguished hands.

SHEEHY

The white uniformed figure in cap and slacks who followed the play up and down the sidelines as a sort of flunkey for the head linesman was an eminent man of the cloth getting a vicarious thrill out of the game he played as a youth.

He was the Right Rev. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religion, of Catholic University.

Father Sheehy yesterday laughingly admitted his identity as the white-clad figure who "caddied" for the head linesman.

"Coach Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame, was on my staff when I was athletic director at Columbia College, at Dubuque, Iowa," said Father Sheehy.

"I did not want to see any recurrence of the incident in the Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech game when there was confusion about the number of the downs, so I applied to Layden for the job in the Army game.

"Besides, one gets a wonderful view of the game from that angle."

Duke Only Unscored Upon Team in Country

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The Blue Devils of Duke University, with their 14-0 victory over North Carolina, emerged from the sultry weather of October's last Saturday the only unscored upon, undefeated and untied football team of the country.

Thirty teams with unblemished records are on this week's Associated Press compilation, but of the 30 only Duke has not had its goal line crossed. The Blue Devils, leaders of the Southern Conference, have gone to the wars six times and piled up 79 points.

hostilities today as Eastern, last year's champion, entertains Anacostia at Eastern and Western plays host to Wilson at the R street Stadium. Both games start at 3:30.

Eastern and Western should be the eventual winners. Eastern's opponent is entered in the schoolboy scramble for the first time and has won neither of its starts. One it dropped to Western and the other was a scoreless tie with Wilson.

Weighing in the youthful Indian squad's favor, however, is the return to the line-up of Bob "Flash" Gordon, who was injured in the Indians' first encounter this year. A shattered leg that necessitated hospital attention has healed sufficiently to allow his participation in today's game. Another factor in Anacostia's favor is the time elapsed since the team played a game.

Eastern, with one loss and one tie behind it, should be no prohibitive favorite.

Winner of the clash at Western Stadium, between the Red Raiders and Wilson would be easily picked were it not for the aptitude Wilson has shown for upsetting plans. On the extreme short end of the odds in its struggle with Eastern, it managed a 6-6 deadlock.

Of the four teams carded for today's battles, Western alone stands a chance for the Inter-High crown. A bad start at the first of the season, dropping a game to Central, put Coach Dan Ahern's squad in an undesirable spot it is just now straightening out of.

Beattie Feathers Reported 'Fair'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 31.—Officials of St. Mary's Hospital today announced that the condition of Beattie Feathers, halfback of the Brooklyn Dodgers' professional football team, was "fair." Feathers sustained a fracture of the frontal sinus when tackled in the first quarter of yesterday's game with the National League champion Redskins.

Dr. M. T. Reynolds, Feathers' physician, later said the former Tennessee star seemed to be "resting comfortably," but that it would depend largely on the player himself whether he played again this season.

50,000 Fans Expected to Watch Race

Both Fit and Ready Fast Track Forecast 'Dream Race' Reality Jockeys Confident

(Track records at Pimlico, records of Seabiscuit's and War Admiral's past races, Bill Bennings' column and entries and results of today's races appear on Page 22.)

By Walter Haight.

War Admiral vs. Seabiscuit—racing's irresistible force meeting racing's immovable object—and while a Nation awaits the result, upwards of 50,000 regular, occasional and maiden turf fans, the largest gathering of humanity ever to see a horse race in this area, will jam the clubhouse, grandstand, lawn and overflow into the infield at historic Pimlico today.

Over a mile and three-sixteenths of good old terra firma, where men with flowing moustaches sat upright on their steeds and raced for bags of gold more than a century ago, War Admiral, born with the equine equivalent of a silver spoon in his mouth, battles it out with Seabiscuit, a horse who gained stardom the hard way.

War Admiral, speedy son of Man O'War and Brushup, owned by Samuel D. Riddle, ruled a prerace favorite at odds of 3 to 5 last night. Seabiscuit, gallant son of Hard Tack and Swing On, owned by Charles S. Howard, was held at 6 to 5. But yesterday afternoon the writer saw several large wagers made, with one of $500 to $250 on War Admiral. Of course, in the mutuel form of betting, the actual price on the two horses will not be known until the "tote" closes.

Barrier Rises at 3:50.

The "dream race," that most turf fans believed would remain merely a dream, will be an actuality at approximately 3:50 this afternoon.

Every detail has been worked out. Although officially the race will not be on until 3:30 this morning when Jervis Spencer, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission and the one-man weather judge, rules that the track is in "suitable condition," the forecast is for fair weather and, in track parlance, "the course will never be faster."

With the exception of brief intervals yesterday morning when War Admiral and Seabiscuit were on the track, a crew was manicuring the oval. Shortly after noon, the track was at its best, even down to the removal of stones by a crew of men who walked over every inch of the mile oval removing every pebble in sight.

Every box and reserved seat has been sold. The gates will be opened at 10 a. m. and unreserved sections of the grandstand will go to the first to reach the seats. Every precaution has been taken to provide for the crowd in the infield. Betting booths and other conveniences have been set up. General Manager Matt Daiger predicts a record gathering. The present mark is 41,063, on Preakness Day, 1935.

Both Horses Ready

The time-worn track phrase of "fit and ready" best describes the condition of the two horses. Neither seemed to have a thought of his importance on the track yesterday. Shortly after 9 o'clock, War Admiral came through a gate accompanied by a lead pony. The two jogged around the oval slowly and Trainer George Conway waved the colt back to the barn.

After the workout, Trainer Conway said, "War Admiral, in my opinion, is as good as when he won the 1937 Kentucky Derby. That causes me to predict he will win tomorrow after a bitter struggle."

Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, who rides War Admiral, said his charge would take the lead at the start and never once give Seabiscuit a chance to catch him.

An hour later, Seabiscuit appeared. He warmed up and was taken to the half pole along with Limpio, a South American-bred stablemate. Jockey George Woolf broke Seabiscuit running. Owner Howard, Trainer Tom Smith, and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the man who matched the rivals, all held watches. Woolf never let Seabiscuit have his head and the horse was well in hand after going a half-mile in 0:49 1-5.

$15,000 Added to Winner

Reflecting confidence, Seabiscuit's camp was silent as far as predictions for publication were concerned. However, those who saw the Biscuit work out were impressed and he gained many supporters. Among the run-of-the-mine horsemen the word is "War Admiral," almost unanimously. The writer had a hard time locating one Seabiscuit rooter around the secretary's office yesterday morning, but on all sides there is a prediction that it will be a real battle.

While the most the winner can earn is the $15,000 added money offered by the track, that cash will send him a notch closer to his objective, the all-time money-winning record of $376,744 held by Sun Beau. Seabiscuit, with $332,405 to his credit, is closest to the goal now. War Admiral, thus far, has earned $257,650. Just the tip of his nose, in reality, kept Seabiscuit from being the champion for his defeat in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap last march was by that margin.

Both Carry 120 Pounds

Kurtsinger and Woolf, the rival riders, are both veterans of their trade. Kurtsinger, a Louisville boy, is the lighter of the pair and War Admiral will have enough lead in his saddle to bring the weight to the 120 pounds that both horses will carry. Known as "The Flying Dutchman," Kurtsinger is 31 years old. He has ridden War Admiral in all but five of his starts.

Woolf hails from Montana, a State that has provided many great

Resentment Against Owner Flares Among Redskins

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

Letters are always welcome to this column, particularly many that we have been receiving during the past couple of weeks, for from them it appears as though quite a few Maryland citizens are beginning to recognize, from our humble efforts, that their great State is not according the black bass the protection it so richly merits—that there is a lot of room for improvement in the conservation of fish and game.

ACKERMAN.

He says: "I have noted with much interest your articles on the lack of protection for black bass in Maryland, and feel that I might lend a hand in the effort to protect these real fighters. I am a native of Maryland and, to say the least, I am ashamed of the fact that our Legislature has been so slow to realize the necessity of protecting these fish.

"A short time ago I realized I had some friends that I might interest in this piece of legislation and suggested it to them. They would like to have these articles, which I failed to clip. Can you let me have them?"

They are in the mail, major, and, to say the least, we are deeply gratified to know our writings are "bearing fruit." Your thanks for your interest will come from other natives, unable to go further afield, for better fishing at home.

Another letter, from R. H. D., and we are not so particularly proud of this one, because it leaves us with a feeling of not having accomplished what we are trying to do.

"In your fishing news in The Post I would like you to write something for the novice. You tell where the fish are being caught, but say little as to how or what bait is being used. In other words, you take it for granted everyone knows how. I am off for three days next week and would like to know where to go and what method to use. Will you answer this in your column?"

We have always thought the embryo angler should make his first excursions with someone who knows what it is all about, for there are primary requirements that can be learned only by observation. We don't say they cannot be learned otherwise, but the expenditure of time would be so disheartening that in all probability the sport would be discarded in disguest before the productive and enjoyable period was achieved.

With between 60,000 and 100,000 anglers, who have some idea of tackle and bait requirements, to tell where to go in an area with a radius of 300 miles, is somewhat of a job, and they don't seem to want to wade through a lot of rudimentary stuff to pick out the meat. However, the beginner, as well as the tyro, and finished angler, has equal rights in our notes, so, in a sort of hot-stove league, which we have mentioned several times this season, and hope to get under way shortly, we are going to take each individual fish, and try to tell in words just what it takes to catch them throughout the different seasons of the year.

In the meantime, R. H. D., if you will give me a call on the phone, because you didn't include your address, we will tell you what, and how, to spend that three days.

There is little doubt that game fishing is increasing in popularity with every passing year. Not only are guides and guide boats following the big fish from the warm tropical waters of southern Florida to the ice-laden ones of Nova Scotia, but everywhere along the coast, cities and towns are planning facilities for the privately owned sportfishermen that are increasing with leaps and bounds. It isn't hard to believe that in a few more years they will greatly outnumber the commercial boats.

Have you seen the Rex rod holders? Folding compactly enough to fit any kit, they are equally useful on boat or ashore, to give the angler the chance to take a smoke or eat his lunch.

Frank T. Bell, commissioner of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, is so het up with the sport he enjoyed in Hawaiian waters on his recent trip that we hope to have him tell you in his own words, all about it.

Do you know these waters grow bonadsh, generally rated as the fastest of all our game fishes, to nearly twice the size of the largest caught in our South Atlantic? No less a person than Capt. Tommy Gifford, Miami and Bimini guide, is the authority, for while there on a recent fishing trip he saw one that would weigh close to 25 pounds. Yet the record of albula vulpes on the books is but 13¼ pounds, taken off Bimini in 1919.

'Biggie' Goldberg In Hospital With Torn Ligament

Pittsburgh, Oct. 31 (AP).—Marshall Goldberg, Pitt's great fullback who scored two touchdowns against the Fordham Rams Saturday, lay in a hospital today with a torn ligament.

Pitt authorities said they did not believe the injury serious but would not venture an opinion whether "Biggie," an all-American halfback of last season, would be in condition to play in the Carnegie Tech game next Saturday. He was hurt in the final play of the first quarter Saturday, but stayed in the game until near the end.

Marshall Accused of 'Chiseling'

Players Grumbling Exhibitions Hit Players Want Pay Flaherty in Middle

Evidence that all is not tranquil among the Washington Redskins despite their position at the top of the Eastern division standings was obtained by The Post yesterday.

Redskin players are grumbling at what they term the "chiseling tactics" of Owner George P. Marshall. The squad, although loyal to Head Coach Ray Flaherty, is in near-open revolt against the Redskin owner.

Marshall's alleged failure to cut the players in for a share of the exhibition games is the basis of the discontent, according to one of the more highly-rated stars of the team who has been the spokesman for the players.

"We received nothing for playing the exhibition game at Louisville in September, although the Redskins' front office received a sizeable guarantee for the game," said the player. "And we have already been told that we can expect nothing from an exhibition game scheduled at Richmond in November."

Other Clubs Play

Several players have pointed out that their contracts with Marshall call for them to be paid for exhibition games as well as league games. "Our contract says that we are to be paid 'a sum to be agreed upon' for the exhibition games. We have reminded Marshall about that, but received nothing."

Every other club in the league pays its players for exhibition games scheduled during the league season, according to the Redskins' spokesman. "Even the Pittsburgh Pirates, who are losing money this year, are paying their players," he said.

"When the Redskins were playing for Boston and losing money, we didn't expect to get paid for our exhibitions, and last year with Washington we were still willing to string along because we did not know if it would be a profitable season for Marshall. But now the club is making money—a lot of it—and we want to be paid."

The players' case has been laid before Marshall by Head Coach Flaherty who recommended that they be paid for exhibitions, according to the spokesman, but no satisfaction has been given. "It isn't Flaherty's fault. He's for us," was the declaration, "but Marshall isn't doing himself any good by chiseling on us.

"In fact, Marshall is ham-stringing Flaherty. That's what it amounts to. One of Ray's big jobs is to keep the players on his club contented but he's not getting any support from Marshall. We're not kids anymore. Flaherty's pep talks can't make us forget that we're getting a raw deal."

"Himself to Blame"

The Redskins' discontent began last January after they had won the championship of the league and set forth on an exhibition tour to California and the South. Marshall incurred a $6,000 loss on that tour, but the Redskins hold themselves blameless.

"He has only himself to blame for taking that $6,000 rap. We wanted to play the exhibition games on percentage, but he wouldn't let us. He thought he could get a terrific gate out of a Los Angeles game, and he insisted on paying us our regular weekly salary instead of a percentage. The Los Angeles game fell through, the others didn't draw, and he took the loss instead of us."

Displaying little of the dash and fire they had shown in previous games, the Redskins on Sunday played a 6-6 tie with Brooklyn after taking the field as heavy favorites.

"The fellows just didn't have the old spirit," one veteran remarked. "and I think I know why."

Central High Wallops Roosevelt, 26-0; Ties For Scholastic Lead

Record 3,000 Crowd Sees Game Victors Score Twice in 2d and 3d Benny Steiner Figures in All Touchdowns

The lightning offense of Central High tamed Roosevelt's Riders yesterday at Central Stadium and the Mount Pleasanters drew up even with Tech for the interhigh grid lead.

Before a record throng of 3,000 the two elevens battled on even terms in the first quarter of their traditional game, Central scoring twice in the second and twice in the third to triumph, 26-0.

Mainly instrumental in the Mount Pleasant team's third straight interhigh victory was lanky Quarterback Benny Steiner, who figured in all of the four touchdowns. Stopping a Rider threat which reached its 19-yard stripe as the game began, Central braced itself and prepared a few threats of its own.

Martin Starts the March

Harry Martin, fullback, picked up the first of six consecutive first downs as the second quarter began, going from his own 9-yard line to the 30. Jim Porter added another, Jim Clark took the ball on an end-around for still another and Central definitely was on the march.

Steiner made two more firsts in as many plunges from Roosevelt's 25 and left the final plunge to Gus Placos, veteran back who had just entered the line-up. Stenier converted.

Before the Rooseveltmen could take a breath, Central struck again to put the game hopelessly out of their reach. This time it was Steiner whose number was called on Roosevelt's 44, and he set out on the journey goalward. Almost every member of the Rider squad had a chance to stop the dash, but Steiner twisted clear in each case. He converted successfully.

A sadly battered Roosevelt team left the field at halftime, trailing 14-0. It had played desperate football as the game opened and it wasn't good enough. Three times the Riders blocked Steiner's boots, but each time the recoverer was downed before he could move.

The second half had no more than started when Steiner again got under way. Stepping back to the midfield stripe, he hurled the neatest pass of the series to date to Jimmy Clark on Roosevelt's 15. Clark twisted away from three tacklers to score. Steiner missed this placement as he did the final attempt a few moments later.

Figuring the aerial method was as good as any, Quarterback Steiner called another pass as his club came into possession again on the 50-yard marker. A flat one to rangy Dick Farr, substitute end, and the latter stumbled 30 yards to score.

Finest Display of the Series

It was perhaps the finest display of football the series has seen this year. Central substituted freely in the final session, otherwise the score might have been twice as lopsided. The period, nevertheless, was the means of uncovering several potential stars on Central's second team. Danny Magnuson played well in the fullback spot, as did Wilhelm, Aed and Samperton, an end who frequently broke up Rider passes before they were thrown.

Roosevelt's Danny Booth carried the defensive burden of the club, aided by Wicklein, Dick Metzler and Pearlman. Frank "Yankee" Laddbush, the hero of Roosevelt's loss to Western last week, hit the line for several good gains, but his interference was negligible.

One touchdown which didn't count was scored by Central late in the third period when Dave Wilhelm intercepted Wicklein's pass about midfield and romped to the goal. On the next play Wilhelm again intercepted Wicklein's pass to Booth, but this time was stopped in his tracks.

CATHOLIC FROSH DEFEAT DEVITT

Catholic University's freshman eleven scored in the second period yesterday and protected the lead to defeat Devitt Prep School, 7 to 2, in C. U. Stadium.

The Little Cardinals marched to the Prepsters' 7-yard line in the second quarter on a long pass from Griffin to Norris and several successful line plunges by Griffin. Devitt was penalized 5 yards for offside and Norris scored on the third play following the penalty. Kscycewski's drop kick for the extra point was good.

The Devitt eleven scored their safety in the third period after Kemp's kick bounced out of bounds on the C. U. 1-yard line. Stanton tackled Norris in the end zone for the two points.

The Cardinals outplayed the visitors in the first half but a Devitt offensive in the later periods nearly reversed the decision.

Strongbow On Mat Card

To Meet Berger Weighs 280 Pounds Former Strong Man

Another Redskin was added to last night's wrestling card when Jules Strongbow, gigantic Cherokee from Broken Arrow, Okla., stamped his tumb mark on one of Uncle Joe Turner's neatly embossed contracts. Strongbow will make his District debut against Casey Berger in a 30-minute preliminary.

Weighing 280 pounds and standing 6 feet 11 inches in his moccasins, Strongbow is billed as the most powerful man in the game today, and comes rather close to fulfilling that publicity boast. He wants the All-America wrestling title, that is he says he can take all the other Indians cavorting on the carpet and stack 'em as neatly as cordwood—any night in the week.

He's aiming for a bout with Chief Little Wolfe, who is featured with Joe Savoldi at the Arena this week, and may get it if the pair look good enough to warrant a return engagement. Strongbow, moreover, is willing to tackle anybody Turner can secure for him, and has broadly hinted that the matchmakers are giving him the well-known runaround.

Strongbow turned to bona fide grappling after serving his apprenticeship as strong man with Gordon's Circus. He was discovered by "Toots" Mondt, and converted into a wrestler by Tom Packs, veteran St. Louis promoter.

Thursday's card includes the "Golden Terror," who faces Tom Mahoney; Hank Matheny vs. Sammy Menacher, and Dr. Len Hall vs. Irish Jack McArthur.

THIS MAY UPSET ALL YOUR IDEAS ABOUT ANTI-FREEZE

THIS anti-freeze story may startle you. It is contrary to long-established beliefs. Tests made over a period of 7 years in 300 cars prove that "Zerone" makes a perfect mixture with water and that you lose little or none by evaporation or separation. Radiator losses are due mainly to mechanical causes—leaks, sudden stops, etc. Where there is boiling, the losses are of the whole solution—"Zerone" and water—and such losses are in about the same proportions as the original protection.

So, first, use "Zerone" in accordance with directions on can or protection chart. Second, never assume that it's the water only, or "Zerone" only, that has been lost when your cooling solution is low. Check strength of the solution, and replace the indicated combination of "Zerone" and water. Otherwise, you may have too much protection or too little, affecting performance and safety.

The materials from which "Zerone" is made are so effective you need less for protection. Replacements, if any, cost you little. So you are wiser to start with Du Pont "Zerone." Remember, it's only $1.00 a gallon. Du Pont, "Zerone" Division, Wilmington, Delaware.

Wally Hally, New Lightweight Hope, Meets Quarles in Arena Ring Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Walter Halliwell, transplanted California clouter operating under the abbreviated handle of Wally Hally, meets up with Quarles tonight at Turner's Arena in the feature 10-round bout of the weekly ring show.

Along Flatear Lane the boys are in a dither over the outcome, puzzling over past performance charts and comparing styles in an attempt to separate the pair. Some like Quarles by as much as 9-5, and some regard it as a toss-up—and some are keeping their counsel. From a strictly impartial viewpoint Quarles looks like the winner after a rousing struggle.

The rivals' styles are perfectly blended for an interesting evening, for Hally walks recklessly into the enemy, spraying leather with both fists, while Quarles prefers to lay back and splatter 'em with one of the deadliest left hooks in the business. If Quarles' timing is right, his punching as sharp as in his past two engagements here, he may flatten Hally; but if he is unable to withstand Wally's bull-like charges the Californian may wrangle a decision out of the judges.

Hally comes well recommended for his initial appearance before Washington ring patrons with the capable Frank Bachman in his corner. Bachman's mere presence with the fighter is a gilt-edge guarantee that Hally is above average to some small degree, at least. Bachman has been associated with too many good fighters to be wasting time with run-down warhorses.

One of the best victories on Hally's slate is a decision over Nicky Camarata, out of Chris Dundee's stable, who is beginning to make a stir among the top-flight lightweights, but he also has several other creditable triumphs to show for his efforts.

Quarles needs neither a letter of introduction nor one explaining his presence on the card. He whipped Lew Feldman here last month, and prior to that polished off Lou Gevinson—at one time the city's most prominent candidate for championship laurels. He has never lost in Washington, and, as a matter of fact, is not in the habit of losing at all. The few defeats on literate larruper's record were at the hands of top-ranking gladiators.

Quarles hopes to fight here frequently this winter for several reasons, and for that reason is putting everything behind his punches to curry favor with the customers. It will be a rip-snorting engagement with an abundance of free-slinging if Norment has his way.

The supporting card finds a pair of heavyweights, Don Koons, of Los Angeles, and Gene Johnson, of Baltimore, in the spotlight. Koons, a redhead, is Hally's stablemate, and a fairly good prospect. They meet in a six-rounder.

Other six-rounders include Tommy Ricco, Camden, vs. Pancho Huerta, Washington, lightweights; and Eddie Saugsted vs. Johnny Sullivan, Richmond, lightweights. A four-rounder involving welterweights—Ray Lewis, Richmond, and Red Osborne, Baltimore, will get the proceedings under way.

Dear Al:

I'm going to take Seabiscuit—and I expect him to win by a length and a half. I'm not day-dreaming, either. If this race were to involve a large field, I would hop on the War Admiral bandwagon. However, it will be horse for horse and I believe that if Seabiscuit is intelligently handled he will take the Riddle star into camp. The workouts of the two horses mean little. Neither has been turned loose over this track since their races here last year. Seabiscuit showed the keener form in actual racing over the track. War Admiral, in the Preakness, went the mile and three-sixteenths route in 1:58 2-5 over a good track. Seabiscuit ran the same distance in the Riggs Handicap in 1:57 2-5 over a fast track; both were under hard drives. War Admiral carried 126 pounds in his race and Seabiscuit toted 130. Both horses were labeled "never better" by their handlers before these races and were doing their best. True, War Admiral was a 3-year-old and Seabiscuit a year older at the time. However, on a strict comparison, Seabiscuit seems to have the edge.

Another thing I like about Seabiscuit is that he is a rough and ready horse. Most turf regulars remember how he was bumped badly at the first turn at Havre de Grace and came on to win. True, his record contains many nose defeats, but it also shows the ability to go to the front or come from behind. Only once in his career has War Admiral been caught by a horse after getting to the front and on that occasion he was beaten by Bottle Cap. If Seabiscuit can "look him in the eye," I confidently believe War Admiral will be through. Seabiscuit has raced in large fields. I have seen him run on a variety of tracks from Maryland to California and I have yet to see him have the best of the racing luck. He invariably has had to lose many yards at the turns. With only War Admiral opposing him, he will save this ground. Of course there are those who believe that War Admiral will take a long lead in the early running. Seabiscuit's record shows many victories in which he was on top at the end of six furlongs in times of from 1:10 3-5 to 1:11 2-5. This compares favorably with the early front-running abilities of War Admiral.

War Admiral hasn't had a real dog-eat-dog stretch battle since he won the Preakness from Pompoon. Seabiscuit has had many in recent months. He has won and lost them, but, almost always after losing that precious ground at the turns or giving away many pounds. Good horse, War Admiral—better horse, Seabiscuit. And if War Admiral wins don't wait to throw things at me. I positively will not come out of the pressbox until after the last race on Saturday.

BILL.

First race—The Hitchcock entry of Eister and Wambaw is well placed and both have schooled over this course. The first-named must carry 160 pounds but I'm going to string along off that Laurel form. The Hour won at the other track and is fit and ready. The Parker-Kline entry of Homesteader and Our Sailor is due some respect.

Second race—Evening Light was away poorly and ran a dismal race last out. With more alert handling at the post, this one may take it all in this field of maidens. Key Man and Part One have shown speed on occasions and will be dangerous contenders. For an old-fashioned shot at the moon we might take a flier at Drosera.

Third race—Golden Vein's legs are reported in good shape and the veteran appears capable of downing this kind of company. Prowl comes off a shorter race and is the one to beat. Flying Mint has general good form and will be a threat.

Fourth race—Rissa gets in this with light weight and improved greatly during the Laurel campaign. This is a tough spot but I'm going to string along. Indomitable and Bartolozzi were prominent in New York company and may fill out the money circle.

Fifth race—Benefactor, a speed demon from New York, appears to be the best of those gathered for this sprint. The scribes from that sector are going overboard on this one. The Milky Way entry of On Location and Time Please is due respect. Banner Girl may get a peek at the money.

Sixth race—Seabiscuit and War Admiral, that's my story and I'm going to stick to it.

Seventh race—I'm going to stick with the Mrs. Viau entry of Conquer and Hypocrite. The former must carry 126 pounds but he has five straight to his credit and knows how to tote the weight. Hypocrite gets in light and is a threat off that second to Jacola. Bottle Top turned back everything in sight in New York and is going to be in the thick of the battle. Lucky Omen can better that last.

Eighth race—John Francis picks up an apprentice rider here and I'm hoping he will be Dupps. Regardless I'm going to take this one. Audley Girl is a speedy miss making her first start hereabouts. Careful Miss could be close with this kind.

Ninth race—(Substitute) Gaurisanker gets the call here if this event is used. In Memory improved at the other track. Scatter Brain should be in the pay circle.

Best Bet—Golden Vein.

D. C. Golfer Blasts Par By a Stroke

67 Low in Pro-Am
Spicer Gets Hole-in-1
Worsham in Leaders
Play at Woodmont

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Leo Walper's one-under par 68 figured in three of the five prizes in the District pro-amateur tournament at Woodmont yesterday, winning the pro sweepstakes, while he was helped a stroke by two partners, Perry Patteson and Frank Williams, of Washington, to figure in the four-way tie for first in the pro-amateur.

Other 67s that split the total purse included a 33—34 by Rut Coffey, Winchester, and Paul Bennett, Martinsburg, and a 32—35 by the Chevy Chase duo of 19-year-old Virgil "Buck" Worsham and John F. Brawner.

Elliott Spicer finished out of the prize list, but he received some consolation by holing his tee shot on the seventeenth hole for the second hole-in-one of his career. Playing with Jerry Hart and Al Jamison, of Indian Spring, and Al Treder, Manor, Spicer hit a five iron that hit 4 feet from the cup and dropped in for an ace.

It was the second of his career, the first coming some ten years ago on the eighth hole at Argyle. Jamison and Spicer finished two strokes out of the money with a 69. It was the second ace made on the seventeenth at Woodmont in competition in the last two years, Helen Dettweiler making the other last year in a woman's tourney in a playoff with Marion Brown.

Two teams, Walper and Congressional's southpaw ace, Earl McAleer, and Gene Larkin and Howard Nordlinger of the host club, missed the money circle with 68s, while Buck Worsham and Rut Coffey were a stroke out of the pro sweepstakes purse with regulation 69s. Coffey had 34-35 and Worsham 33-36.

Walper was out in 36, 1 over par, slipping over on the second and fourth and dropping a birdie deuce on the eighth. The fourth hole was the last one he missed regulation figures, as coming back he had seven pars and birdies on 12 and 15, from 30 and 3-foot putts. Williams helped with a birdie on the sixth and Patterson, Washington club champ, with a birdie on the seventh. McAleer, Walper's third partner, played well but couldn't figure in a hole.

Worsham, making his debut in the first-prize winning circles, played a fine round of golf, with four birdies, all from short putts, and four mistakes, two from underclubbing and one out of bounds. Brawner parred two of the holes. Worsham was over for the 67. Coffey, who has been in the prize money in the local affairs more than a majority of the District pros, was one-under on the out nine and one over on the back, with Bennett also helping two holes.

Mrs. Amick, Miss Dettweiler Win

Scores of 79 And 78 Low In Tourney

At Washington Club Mrs. Kihlken Victor Takes 2d Low Net Four Tie With 81

Mrs. E. M. Amick, with a net 79, and Helen Dettweiler's gross card of 78 shared honors in the second annual "Fallen Leaves" tournament of the Washington Golf and Country Club Women's Golf Association yesterday over the Virginia layout.

Mrs. Amick, of Columbia, finalist in The Washington Post match play tournament in 1937, and a prominent committee member of the District golf body, paired two consistent nines of 45 for a 90 and deducted an 11 handicap for a 79. Mrs. Amick's only bad hole was the twelfth, where she took a seven.

Miss Dettweiler was out in 40, including a disastrous six on the eighth hole, but was back in 38, aided by a birdie deuce on the eleventh. The Congressional Club champion's score was only a stroke over women's par and five shots ahead of the next best effort, Marion Brown's 83.

Mrs. H. Kihlken, Indian Spring, won second low net with 102-22, 80. Four tied at 81s for the next low net scores, with Mrs. W. Masten, Washington, Mrs. David Clark, Army and Navy; Mrs. A. A. McEntee, Kenwood, and Marion Brown, Manor, winning in the draw, in that order. Mrs. Masten scored 93-12, 81; Mrs. Clark, Service Club champion, 43, 31—84-3, 81; Mrs. McEntee, 92-12, 81, and Miss Brown, 43-40, 83-2, 81.

The 82s also were tied for net prizes from seven through ten, with Mrs. F. W. Bradbury, Washington, 104—22—82; Mrs. Max Taylor, Manor, 98—16—82; Mrs. R. Torlinski, Army and Navy, 96—14—82, and Mrs. Charles Vaile, Kenwood, 95—13—82, winning in that order.

Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, Congressional, won the eleventh low net prize with a 90—7—83 in a draw. Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam, was out in 43 and on the sixteenth tee had par 84 for one of the lowest scores of her career, but was trapped on her second shot near the green and finished up with a ten on the hole. She had 91 for the round and a net 83, that lost in the draw with Mrs. C. F. Thompson and Mrs. L. G. Pray.

A field of 132 competed in the event that was originated last year by Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely. Mrs. G. C. Roney was chairman of the event this year, and was assisted by the former. Golf apparel went to the winners. WHITTLESEY.

Postscripts . . .

George Washington, which will continue baseball next season and elevate it to the status of major sport, already is stocking up with first-class local material, according to the grapevine. Ticketed for delivery to the G-Street school are West Taylor, Eastern's All-High catcher; Lee Lusby, Eastern's All-High second baseman, who won similar honors in basketball; Jack Reddinger, Roosevelt's All-High pitcher and George Ortell, Western's All-High outfielder . . . Georgetown, in the midst of its first undefeated season, is receiving more national publicity than has ever attended a Hilltop eleven. New York and Chicago newspapers mention the Hoyas in the same breath with Pitt and Dartmouth when they rank the Eastern football leaders. Wonder if Pitt has voted on the Rose Bowl yet?

Al Spivok, one of Roosevelt's better all-around athletes not many years ago, will walk the aisle with Jeanette Schlaifer on November 27. The marriage will take place in Baltimore, native city of the bride-to-be. Spivok is employed by the FAC and plays first base on its nine . . . George Howard, former St. John's Prep, is waiting to renew acquaintances with several of the Notre Dame football squad which is scheduled to work out here Thursday. Howard was graduated from Notre Dame in June and now is working for The Post.

Going a long way to prove nothing. Pitt is not the strongest football in the country. Catawba is, and here's why. Catawba tied Roanoke, 6-6 making it as good as Roanoke. Roanoke defeated Richmond, 13-6 making Catawba seven points better than Richmond. Richmond walloped Hampden-Sydney, 6-0 making Catawba 33 points better than Hampden-Sydney. Hampden-Sydney lost to Washington and Lee, 7-6 which makes Catawba 33 points better than W. and L.; W. and L. tied West Virginia, which makes Catawba 32 points better than West Virginia. West Virginia lost to Pittsburgh only 19-0. So draw your own conclusions.

A good flyer—Virginia to beat Luckman-less Columbia Saturday. Bookies here will quote you 1-2 odds on War Admiral, but try and get a bet that way.

Thought While Thinking—The predominantly Catholic population of New Orleans won't hurt Georgetown's chances of getting a Sugar Bowl bid.

JACK MUNHALL.

Redskins Leaders In Ground Gaining

Champions Boast 301 Yards for Seven Games Green Bay Packers Lead in Scoring Parade Giants Have Best Percentage in Passing

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 31.—Apparently headed for a new record, the 10 teams of the National Professional Football League have scored 999 points in their 35 games so far, to keep ahead of the pace set in 1937, when a mark of 1,424 points was established for the season.

Leading the scoring parade are the Green Bay Packers, western division leaders who have piled up 168 points in eight games for an average of 21. Philadelphia and Cleveland, with 98 and 101, already have exceeded their 1937 totals, while Washington, New York and Brooklyn have better averages than they possessed a year ago.

The defending champion Washington Redskins continue to lead in ground gaining with an average of 301 yards for seven games, to Green Bay's 276 and the New York Giants' 268. The Giants have the best passing percentage, 61 completions in 117 attempts for 52 per cent, with Washington second on 75 completions in 148 tries.

The Detroit Lions, who have allowed their opponents only 49 points, and the Giants, who have held the opposition to an average of 178 yards per game, are the best in these defensive departments.

Hoyas Try New Plays For Bisons

Hope to Offset Weight Bucknell Is Heavier Game Set Friday Colonials Stage Drill

By Jack Munhall.

Several new plays designed to penetrate an unusually heavy Bucknell line occupied Georgetown's undefeated football forces yesterday as they prepared for Friday night's engagement with the Bisons at Griffith Stadium.

Because of the battered and bruised condition of his charges, Coach Jack Hagerty put aside any thought of scrimmage and Georgetown probably will have no rough work this week.

Jules Koshlap, sophomore passing sensation; Myron Darmohray, substitute fullback; John Lascari, sub guard, and John (Lefty) Riafski, regular center, and Lou Ghecas, dependable halfback, all are nursing more or less painful bruises and need plenty of rest, according to Trainer Harry Crowley. The quartet, along with Fullback Jim Castiglia, are expected to be ready for Bucknell, however.

George Murtagh, Georgetown end coach who has scouted Bucknell several times, reported to Hagerty that the Bisons are much more formidable than supposed and their 26-0 rout by Temple could promptly be thrown out.

The Bucknell combination is seasoned with veterans and boasts in Lou Tomasetti one of the East's most talented and versatile backs. Tomasetti, whose specialty is long-distance booting, is remembered here for his sterling performance against Georgetown in 1936.

In addition to Tomasetti, the Bisons have outstanding players in Quarterback Bill Lane, passing threat; George Klick, line-smashing fullback, and Linemen Frank Pocius, Kurt Manrodt, Jack Lynn and Joe Grieco. Pocius, a left tackle, is about the best he's seen this season, Murtagh informed Hagerty.

George Washington worked at length on pass defense yesterday as Coach Bill Reinhart warned that unless the Colonials showed much improvement along that line Clemson was likely to duplicate the tactics Mississippi employed with great success Saturday.

M.-A. Pros Elect Officers Tonight

The Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association members will meet tonight in the Belvedere Hotel, Baltimore, to elect officers for 1939 and select delegates for the annual meeting at Chicago, November 14-17. It is the first fall meeting in history for the local body.

Outgoing President Ralph Beach, Suburban, has outlined a busy evening for the association members, who are expected to attend in full.

Fed. Savings Insurance At New Peak

2 Million Protected
$1.4 Billion Covered
4 Years in Operation

By Thomas M. Cahill.

New peaks for the number of institutions and individual savers and the amount of funds it protects have been reached by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation four years after it extended insurance to its first applicant.

Number of savers and investors whose funds now are protected up to $5,000 each by this $115,000,000 Federal agency now exceeds 2,000,000 according to Nugent Fallon, general manager of the corporation. Some 2,071 savings and loan associations holding share accounts totaling $1,402,000,000 and total assets of more than $2,000,000,000 now are covered by insurance.

Created by an act of Congress in June, 1934, the corporation issued its first certificate of insurance in October that year. Since then, it is announced by the corporation, thrift and home financing institutions throughout the country have accepted the idea of Federal insurance and today 1,227 cities and towns from Maine to California have institutions which offer their investors this protection. The territories of Hawaii and Alaska, and every State except Nevada, have insured savings and loan associations.

Ohio Leads

Ohio, a center of savings and loan associations, leads all other States with 215 insured institutions having assets of $399,607,000 and 470,000 investors. California, with 119 insured associations, ranks second in volume of assets, $180,960,000; and New York, with 93 associations, is third in assets with $171,659,000. Other States with more than 100 insured associations are Illinois, 154; Indiana, 125; Pennsylvania, 122, and Texas, 121.

Growth of insurance continues, the corporation reports. Since September 1, 30 associations have applied for it. State legislatures throughout the country are making it legally possible for associations chartered by them to become insured. All Federal-chartered associations are insured. As the result of the recent passage of such legislation in New Jersey and Illinois, 42 State-chartered institutions in the former State and 64 in the latter now protect the savings of their investors by insurance.

Despite the vast national coverage by the corporation, Mr. Fallon explained, it has been required to pay out in losses only $104,845 since it began operation. This speaks well, he said, for the soundness of those institutions which have been insured.

Trust Research Week

A program for observance of "Trust Research Week," November 4 to 9, by the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and in which Gilbert T. Stephenson, of the American Bankers Association, will participate, opens Friday, with conferences of executives of trust institutions in the morning and afternoon. At 7:30 p. m. there will be a dinner meeting at the Willard Hotel attended by presidents, officers and directors of Washington banks, and featured by an address on "Trust Business in Washington."

Saturday and Monday mornings will be devoted to conferences with executives of trust institutions, and on Monday at 10 a. m., there will be a meeting with members of junior and senior classes of Georgetown University Law School, at the university, with an address on "Working Provisions of Wills and Trust Agreements," At 3 p. m. there will be a conference with trust officers in the board room of American Security & Trust Co. "Treadmill or Stairway?" is the subject of an address to be given at a meeting of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at 8 p. m., at the Willard Hotel.

At 12:15 p. m. Tuesday, will be held a luncheon meeting with the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association to discuss "Provisions of Wills and Trust Agreements Relating to Life Insurance." This will be at the Willard Hotel, and will be followed by another trust officers' conference at 2:30 p. m., in the board room of Riggs National Bank. At 5:10 p. m. comes a meeting with junior and senior

Near Months' Cotton Firm

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Irregular price trends again featured cotton today. Near months were steady, but next October, under late pressure, went to the widest discount under present crop positions for the current movement. March advanced from 8.40 to 8.45 and closed at 8.43, with final prices 1 point net higher to 8 points lower.

The market opened narrowly with the effects of disappointing Liverpool cables partly offset by trade and foreign buying. A little local selling and liquidation developed today, but after prices dipped a few points they steadied, influenced by trade price fixing in December. That position rallied into new high ground, but later deliveries lagged. Co-operative brokers were late sellers of October, which dipped 81 points under December and to a final net loss of 8 points.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil declined today under scattered liquidation promoted by the action of lard and hogs, with final prices 3 to 5 points net lower. Sales were 44 contracts. December closed 7.51; January, 7.54; March, 7.64; May, 7.72.

Steel Operations Advance to 56.8%

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 3.1 per cent of capacity to 56.8 per cent, compared with 53.7 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 47.9 per cent of capacity while a year ago they were 48.6 per cent.

Public, Private Management To Be Studied

Conference Board Plan Two-Year Research To Compare Results

New York, Oct. 31.—Dr. Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, announced today that the board had undertaken a two-year program of research into the results of private and public management of economic activity in the United States and other countries.

"The rapid spread of authoritarian systems of control of labor, savings and consumption in all parts of the world," Dr. Jordan said, "puts an inescapable challenge to American enterprise and all the workers, investors and consumers who are part of it, to take stock of its principles, its accomplishments and its possibilities for the future.

"Before many years have passed," he predicted, "the American people will either decide for themselves, or have decided for them by force of circumstances, whether their system of free enterprise is to be preserved or suppressed and replaced by State management of their life and work.

The conference board's investigation, according to Dr. Jordan, will be the first attempt to make a comprehensive appraisal of the relative contributions of private enterprise and government to national prosperity and social welfare, and its purpose is to provide the full and impartial information upon which so crucial a decision for the Nation's future should be made.

The investigation will be carried out by the conference board's large research staff, to which have been added a score of specialists in various economic and social fields. Throughout the preparation of the reports, the researchers will be aided by the board's associated groups of technical advisers and consultants.

New Zephyr Trains Prove Money-Makers

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—Every lightweight streamlined train operating in this country has produced additional passenger traffic and substantial earnings for the railroad placing it in service, according to a report prepared by Coverdale and Colpitts, consulting engineers, for the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Company.

The Denver Zephyrs, of the Burlington Lines, produced the highest ratio of earnings of any train of this type in the year ended June 30, the report shows. Building up a gross revenue of $2,088,938, these Zephyrs earned a net of $1,568,831. This represented 75.1 per cent of the gross, or $2.07 per train mile.

There are now 76 high speed trains in operation on which modern "luxury" equipment has been introduced in the past four years, the report stated. Of this number, 24 are of lightweight, stainless steel construction.

Rails Hold Well Despite Wage Board Report
Industrial Gain Offsets Slight Rail Drop
Pathe Film Day's Most Active Stock

New York, Oct. 31.—The surprise in today's stock market was that railroad issues held as well as they did in the face of the report of the President's fact finding board, appointed to review the rail wage situation, which refused to approve the wage decrease of 15 per cent proposed by the carriers.

With one-third of the railroad mileage of the country now operating under receivership and the balance just holding on in the losing fight against higher costs and taxes, it is difficult to see in the report of the board anything more than politics. Certainly it is not economics.

The board will have a difficult time explaining to the doubters why it found as it did and it will be embarrassed by the reference to the fact that its report came just a week before the election. When the whole situation is boiled over, it leaves the owners of railroad properties, the investors, out on a limb, and means that the railroads are being operated for the benefit of labor and the Government.

The proposal that the roads go deeper into debt to the Government to finance their needs only means that the day when the Government will take over the property of defaulting debtors will be nearer. The carriers need relief in the form of lower taxes and operating expenses, not in the form of additional credit from the all-high in Washington.

On the other side of the argument, attention must be paid to the better traffic results reported by the railroads. If they can hold their own for the rest of the year, the comparison with 1937 will be very favorable, and it may be that the President's board and the union leaders were counting on this.

Freight Gains

Without doubt the investors in railroad stocks also took into consideration the freight rate increases granted earlier this year and the improvement in the general business outlook during the latter part of the year. In any event the selling of the railroad shares, in view of the adverse report from Washington, was not too much to offset the general bullish enthusiasm.

The stock market closed nearly unchanged according to the composite average, showing a gain of 0.03 point, a gain in the industrial section offsetting the moderate decline in the rails. Trading was dull, in comparison with previous days during October, amounting to only 1,092,870 shares. Prominent on the upside were the steel issues, followed by the manufacturing and metal divisions. Oils and motors were firm.

A flurry in the amusement group was featured by the buying in Pathe, which was the day's most active stock. This issue closed up a small fraction, as did radio.

New York Central topped the rail division, closing off one-half point and Southern Pacific was off a fraction. In most of the rails the declines were moderate in view of the news and Southern, which was closely watched, managed to close with a plus sign. Great Northern preferred and Union Pacific were off to a point and Chesapeake & Ohio nearly as much but the declines were far less than had been anticipated after the adverse report.

Outside of the stock market but of great importance to all those concerned in the trading of securities was the announcement of the stock exchange and the Securities and Exchange Commission of the far reaching reforms adopted today The many points taken up by the two announcements all aim at a greater protection of the money and securities of the trading public and in the opinion of representative Wall Street men the proposed reforms go even farther than those involved in the previously announced reorganization of the stock exchange.

Improvement in the steel shares today coincided with the betterment in operations of the industry. Operations this week are placed at 56.8 per cent of capacity compared with 53.7 per cent last week, an increase of 3.1 points or 5.8 per cent. The optimistic ones in the industry are looking for operations of 60 per cent of capacity before the turn of the year.

Among the commodities, wheat tended off on moisture relief in the drought section of Kansas and Nebraska, the close being unchanged to minus ¼ cent a bushel. Cotton closed a point up to off 8 points with the near positions making new highs for the current move.

Railroad bonds turned soft on the week-end announcement of wage findings by the special commission, but the declines were modest in most instances and some bonds managed to resist the trend. Borderline rails were hardest hit, since continuance of the current scales may mean bankruptcy for some of them. Intermediate-priced rails were down from fractions to 2 points, and the highest grade issues were only fractionally lower.

Turnover in the listed bond market was $6,490,000, indicating a general tendency of holders to await fresh developments in the carrier situation. United States Treasury obligations hardly varied, while best rated utility and industrial bonds merely held to former figures. Most of the business that was done was concentrated in the carrier groups.

Local traction securities were in demand, largely in anticipation of a favorable vote next Tuesday on the $315,000,000 unification bond proposal. Amusement issues lost a little of the ground they gained last week. The communications group dropped, and commodity issues were uncertain. Industrial convertibles reflected buying, but rail and utility holding bonds were dull.

Japanese Government bonds advanced in the foreign section, and a little inquiry appeared also for Italian obligations. Some of the German securities likewise reflected buying. Latin-American default bonds were dull, with Chileans still suffering from the effects of the election in that country. High grade foreigns were steady.

Steel Industry Loss 7 Million For Quarter

8 Million in 2d Period
Output 33.9% Up
Prices and Profit Cut

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 31.—Fourteen leading steel producers, representing 83.7 per cent of the country's total ingot capacity, report an aggregate net loss of $7,282,424 for the third quarter, compared with $8,140,206 net loss for the identical companies in the second quarter, according to Steel Magazine, today.

Steel ingot output in the third quarter was 33.9 per cent higher than in the second period, and the failure of earnings to keep pace with this higher rate of operations is attributed to the lower prices. Nine months' net loss for the 14 producers totaled $19,263,099, contrasting with $186,718,410 net profit in the corresponding period in 1937.

Assuming the experience of these 14 to be typical, indicated net loss for the industry was approximately $23,000,000, against $236,000,000 net profit in the first three quarters, 1937.

Ingot production in the third quarter was at a rate of 40.6 per cent of capacity; 30.7 per cent in the second, and 31.6 in the first, averaging 34.4 for the nine months. In the first nine months last year the rate was 83.1 per cent.

Indicated average loss per ton of ingot capacity for the 14 producers in the nine months this year was 44 cents. In the period last year they averaged a net profit of $4.60 per ton of ingot capacity.

Steelworks construction is proceeding as a pace of approximately 50 per cent slower than a year ago, a survey by the magazine Steel's editors reveals. Total expenditures for this work in 1938 is estimated at $160,000,000, compared with $320,000,000 in 1937.

Fifth District Trade Gains in September

Richmond, Va., Oct 31 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today that trade in the Fifth Reserve District showed marked improvement in September over August, although it continued somewhat behind September of last year.

Department store sales showed an increase of 39 per cent over those for August, and wholesale trade improved by about five per cent. The increase in retail sales was partly attributable to seasonal factors but was greater than the normal seasonal rise, which is usually about 25 per cent between August and September.

Wheat Dips With Rains In Kansas

Supply Drops Slightly Exports Negligible Corn Prices Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Indications of at least some moisture relief for drought sections of Kansas and Nebraska tended to make Chicago wheat prices average slightly lower today.

On the other hand, expectations in various quarters that November unofficial crop estimates would show sharply reduced acreage because of drought, served at times to bring about minor transient advances. Buying, though, quickly diminished on upturns, and reactions ensued.

Acting as a handicap to higher prices was the fact that export business in North American grain continued to be of negligible volume. Furthermore, the United States wheat visible supply total decreased only 567,000 bushels versus 4,693,000 bushels decrease a year ago.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ¼ cent down, compared with Saturday's finish, December, 64¾; May, 68⅝@68¾; corn, ⅛ off to ¼ up; December, 45@45⅛; May, 48⅜; oats, ⅛@⅛ advanced; rye, unchanged to ⅛ bulge, and provisions showing 2 cents decline.

Trailer Tintypes

Bob Burns Says—

Did you ever notice the newer the restaurant, the more things they'll have marked off the menu that they're out of? That's because the cook's new, too, and hasn't got on to the ropes yet.

I know an old established restaurant out here that never ran short of anything until the old cook took a vacation. The minute they got a new cook, they started runnin' short of cold chicken. They put a detective on the job and he found that the new, green cook was usin' the cold chicken to make chicken salad.

Andrews Asks More Money To Increase Pay-Hour Staff

Makes Plea to Roosevelt at Conference
Workers May Be 'Loaned' by Agencies
Budget Director Studies Need of Funds

Transfer of additional personnel from other Government departments to the Labor Department's wage-hour division to meet emergency staff requirements was indicated last night following a two-hour White House conference.

Budget Director Daniel Bell was weighing the possibility of making more funds immediately available for administration and enforcement of the labor standards law and of supplementary appropriations in the early days of the next Congress.

Needs of the wage-hour unit were put directly up to the President by Administrator Andrews at a budget conference attended by Bell, Secretary of Labor Perkins, Richard Saunders, assistant to the secretary; Charles O. Gregory, solicitor of the department, and Hampton Magruder, general counsel of the division.

$400,000 Provided

The division was provided with $400,000 to launch the new law, and Andrews has repeatedly complained the amount is insufficient to make necessary staff appointments and to finance the operations of more than one or two of the special industry committees authorized in the act.

Following the conference, Andrews said he may be "loaned" some additional employes from the Labor and other departments. Much of the work of the division is now being done with a "borrowed" staff, officials there said.

Secretary of Labor Perkins told reporters only that the conferees discussed means of financing the work of the division, and its budgetary needs for next year. She declined to estimate additional funds sought.

In other quarters it was learned that Bell was asked to study other appropriations available for transfer, and the possibility of an emergency deficiency appropriation as soon as Congress convenes.

The division now has a staff of only 18 inspectors checking up on wage-hour compliance. To direct the 12 regional offices planned by the division, only four regional supervisors have been named, temporarily handling as well the work of the other eight. In addition, Andrews has asked and obtained co-operation of State labor departments. He recently told reporters he will appoint few if any additional industry committees until Congress reinforces his budget. Only one committee has been named, covering the textile industry.

The inspection staff under Assistant Administrator Arthur L. Fletcher yesterday began establishment of temporary offices in the field. They were instructed to set up offices in Social Security Board headquarters wherever possible.

Games, Dinners Slated By Holy Rosary Church

Italian spaghetti dinners and bingo games will be held tomorrow and Thursday nights in the recently completed parish hall of the Holy Rosary Church, Third and F streets northwest. Proceeds will be used to furnish the hall.

Library Time Extended

The Public Library sub-branch at Eastern High School, Eighteenth and East Capitol streets southeast, will remain open from 12:30 p. m. until 9 p. m., every Thursday beginning Thursday, Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, announced yesterday. The new schedule is an extension of four hours over the other week-day schedules.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

VOICE OF the employes: "Why don't they establish a stenographic pool in Agriculture? It's tough doing the composition and then the typing"—anonymous . . . "Since 1933, Harry L. Hopkins has directed the expenditure of over $12,000,000,000 for the relief of unemployment. His bitterest critics have admitted that Mr. Hopkins has done an honest job. In American politics the expenditure of so vast a sum without the stench of a major scandal is unprecedented"—WPA Local 1 (C. I. O.).

Otherwises: While there is much mental mulling among the waiters' project over the lay-off alarm (the employment curve goes up, the relief curve goes down), they nevertheless have been putting the bee on the director for promotions-from-within and recognition of seniority rights. The director has made no promises . . . And the Navy Department is a little disgusted with the spy trial, thinking that the big shots got away and all the fuss was over some small fry.

Again: All TVA movies are directed by Maurice Henle, of TVA's information office . . . Also, TVA, the business-like body, has undertaken a survey that tells more about typewriter efficiency than ever was known before . . . A clerk wants to know what Mayor Hague said about the subversive entry of his realm by those horrible Martians.

The most extraordinary item from the Martian invasion broadcast concerns a Federal employe who calls up to say that he "heard a part of the thing but turned it off through boredom."

FRED A. Hutchinson, president of Commerce Lodge 9, A. F. G. E., has pulled from his trunk a declaration on Federal courts of appeals, which he read to the Chicago convention, and it bodes no good to the appeals system as tentatively proposed by Civil Service President Mitchell. It seems another basis for the belief that no system will be worked out without a contest.

The burden of Hutchinson's remarks then was that employes are not interested or overly enthusiastic about a system that brings their complaints to trial before personnel or officers of the department or agency to which the appellant belongs. And this state of affairs would prevail under the plan tentatively envisaged by Mr. Mitchell.

You will recall that he suggested using conciliation committees, or some form of trial board, in the departments and agencies, and a last court of appeals—whose decisions would be final—elsewhere, possibly within the Civil Service Commission itself. But before reaching this final court, the appelant would first stand before the department or agency committees.

That, Hutchinson said last summer, is deemed undesirable. "Employes realize that such boards, under the influence of department heads, and certainly with first consideration of their own standing, cannot give to appeals that impartial, unprejudiced, free judgment that fair dealing and justice demand be accorded the complaint of an aggrieved fellow-worker," he said.

Just how far the A. F. G. E. proposes to push the idea against departmental appeals systems, or even if it agrees with Mr. Hutchison's paper, is something else. The point is that all grievances, because of sheer volume, could not be taken to an independent court. In the first place, most of the cases would be too trivial. And the Congress won't authorize and support any appeals body that operated on such a large scale.

Hutchinson says: "It is the contention of . . . Commerce Lodge, No. 9, that all appeals of major importance, affecting vitally the interest of employes, should be placed before some fair, impartial, unbiased tribunal who is in no way connected with the parties concerned." This person should be legally trained, preferably a U. S. judge, and the cases should be conducted as before any court of trial, he stated.

Which still leaves perhaps hundreds of minor cases either for disposition before a departmental conciliation committee or to clog up the independent court.

President Receives Progress Report on Wage-Hour Law

Harris & Ewing.

U. S. to Aid Storm-Hit Timberland Owners

After a conference with the President yesterday, Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said, several Federal agencies will co-operate in assisting timber owners in New England to salvage their timber blown down in the recent hurricane.

Engineers Assigned to Study Channel Work

Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of Army Engineers, assigned Col. Jarvis J. Bain, division engineer at Richmond, Va., yesterday to prepare a report on whether improvement of the Pocomoke River channel above the bridge at Snow Hill was advisable at this time.
